the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK, and the number of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services has also increased (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with a mental health problem, and to reduce the stigma and discrimination that they experience. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services that are more user-centred and more focused on the needs of people with a mental health problem (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990, 1994, 1997, 2003).

One of the key areas of focus is the need to improve the lives of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services. This includes people who are in contact with mental health services through the criminal justice system, and people who are in contact with mental health services through the health care system. This paper focuses on the needs of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services through the criminal justice system.

The paper is organized as follows. The first section discusses the need to improve the lives of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services through the criminal justice system. The second section discusses the need to improve the lives of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services through the health care system. The third section discusses the need to improve the lives of people with a mental health problem who are in contact with mental health services through the criminal justice system.
