RE: Agenda Item E.5 (Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including RCA and Area Adjustments)

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

We write to express our support for the Pacific Fishery Management Council's (Council) ongoing efforts to develop an amendment to its Groundfish Fishery Management Plan (FMP) to holistically address and improve both habitat protections and economic opportunities in the fishery. Such an approach is another example of the Council's demonstrated commitment to the implementation of Ecosystem-Based Fishery Management (EBFM), not only through its Fishery Ecosystem Plan (FEP) and related Ecosystem Initiatives, but also through more traditional actions taken under its four existing single-species FMPs.

At the April Council meeting, we ask the Council to advance this Groundfish FMP amendment by delineating a broad scope for the action and providing guidance on the development of a wide range of alternatives. We place special emphasis on including alternatives expanding bottom trawl closures of unfished areas to the pristine deepwater beyond the 3,500 meter depth contour and on protection of deep sea corals (DSC) and other structure forming invertebrates. On the following pages we offer detailed recommendations in these and other areas, summarized as follows:

- Include the following in the scope of issues to be addressed in the FMP amendment through the development of a range of alternatives:
 - New or modified designations of Essential Fish Habitat (EFH) for Council-managed groundfish species
 - New or modified EFH Conservation Areas
 - New or modified habitat protections under authorities other than EFH
 - New or modified area-based management measures to address mortality or bycatch
 - New or modified gear regulations to address management needs including habitat protection (e.g., measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl gear)
 - New designations of key prey species of Council-managed groundfish
- Incorporate the remaining stakeholder proposals from Phase II of the five year EFH review into a menu of options available to the Council, organized by the type of management measures described (e.g., EFH designations, EFH closures, gear-related regulations, etc.)
- Adopt a coastwide scope for the development of a range of alternatives

- Develop alternatives for closing areas beyond the 3,500 meter depth contour to bottom trawling under authorities other than EFH, especially the broad authority in Section 303(b)(12) of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (MSA)
- Prioritize the protection of DSC and other structure-forming invertebrates, through the utilization of EFH or other legal authorities
- Adopt a process and schedule for further development of the FMP amendment, including:
 - Review and adopt a range of alternatives at the September 2015 Council meeting, as currently planned on a provisional basis in the Council's Preliminary Year at a Glance Summary
 - Schedule the adoption of Preliminary Preferred Alternatives (PPA) for the April 2016 Council meeting

Introduction:

The Council has become a leader on practicable, operational implementation of EBFM, which is demonstrated through the evolution of this management action. First, the Council initiated and completed a proactive, robust five year review of groundfish EFH, including solicitation and review of a set of stakeholder proposals for EFH revisions. Upon concluding that sufficient new information was available to warrant consideration of new EFH provisions, the Council initiated an FMP amendment.

Second, the Council recognized that certain area-based management measures in the FMP originally created to address issues other than habitat nevertheless had significant ancillary habitat benefits, and thus any revision of those measures could have habitat implications. Most prominently, this applies to potential revisions the Council hopes to adopt for the depth-based Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA).

In light of this the Council decided to consider combining these two complex yet critical management actions into a single amendment. This type of holistic approach is highly consistent with the tenets of EBFM, and the Council deserves credit for this decision.

The Council also deserves credit for its willingness to look beyond legal requirements and seek proactive, precautionary, ecosystem-oriented habitat protections like its past efforts to freeze the footprint of bottom trawling. Now the Council's deliberative, stakeholder-driven approach has again presented the opportunity to make significant strides in this direction. Therefore we urge the Council to cast a wide net as it sets the scope of this FMP amendment, developing alternatives for a wide array of potential new habitat and EFH protections including expansion of the trawl footprint closure beyond its current 3,500 meter depth limit, and also alternatives for modification of various area-based management measures that will improve both habitat protection and fishery profitability.

The information on the following pages provides a more thorough analysis and justification of our requests.

Identify a wide scope of issues for development of alternatives, including habitat protections under authorities other than EFH and including adjustments to area-based management measures (e.g., RCA):

The FMP amendment currently being scoped was initiated as a result of the Council's recent five-year review of groundfish EFH. It was originally a more narrowly focused action to review and update EFH designations and protections for managed groundfish species. Subsequently, the Council decided to consider the inclusion of other issues in the amendment, including issues of an area-based nature with potential habitat ramifications or a nexus to habitat concerns.

The primary example of an area-based management issue with a habitat nexus that has been added is consideration of adjustments to the depth-based RCA. This longstanding and highly successful management measure, a complex array of large coastwide seasonal and year-round closed areas, was created in 2002 to address incidental catch of overfished stocks.¹

As these overfished stocks have begun to recover, the Council and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Fisheries Service (NOAA Fisheries) have appropriately considered changes to portions of the boundary of the RCA to liberalize fishery access, such as a Council proposal in 2013 to re-open certain areas that have been closed to bottom trawling since 2004.² The proposed re-openings were subsequently found to include areas that may have partially recovered from trawl impacts.³

NOAA Fisheries in turn concluded that RCA changes of this magnitude may have habitat-related impacts, and that additional analysis (including further progress of the Council's ongoing review of groundfish EFH) was needed before the RCA changes could be approved.⁴ While the RCA closures were not established to serve as habitat protection (they were intended to address catch and bycatch of overfished stocks), they are nevertheless recognized for their "corollary mitigating effect on adverse impacts to EFH."⁵ As such, it is important to consider, analyze, and address the EFH-related effects of any RCA boundary changes. The most efficient and comprehensive way to do so is through a combined FMP action with goals and objectives designed to achieve an overall improvement and increase in habitat protection, consistent with provisions of the MSA that call for the conservation and enhancement of EFH.⁶

In September 2014 the Council recognized the value of a combined FMP action and decided to consider "a package of actions related to area management modifications concurrently with the essential fish habitat amendment (EFH) process.”⁷ These potentially include RCA revisions, changes to midwater trawl access to RCA and EFH Conservation Areas, modifications to area-based gear restrictions, and possible creation of a new RCA to conserve cowcod.⁸

We support this expanded scope for the amendment. The addition of potential adjustments to area-based management measures will certainly increase the complexity of the action and the associated analyses. However, it will ensure that managers can make fully informed and holistic decisions and that any FMP revisions designed to increase industry access and profitability also meet requirements to conserve and enhance EFH.

We also support setting the scope of the amendment such that habitat protections under authorities other than EFH can be considered and included in the range of alternatives. In particular, the Council should develop and include alternatives for protecting deepwater habitat beyond 3,500 meters through an expansion of the trawl footprint closure. If EFH authority is not a viable approach to accomplish this objective, the MSA includes several other provisions that are well-suited to the task such as the broad authority to conserve fishery resources, including habitats, throughout the ecosystem.

The authority for habitat protections in this fragile portion of the ecosystem has long been available in the MSA. The “conservation and management” called for in the very title of the law is defined broadly to include measures to “rebuild, restore, or maintain....any fishery resource and the marine environment” (emphasis added) and intended to assure that adverse effects are avoided.⁹ Furthermore, the fishery resources referred to in the definition of conservation and management are also defined in the MSA to include “any species of fish, and any habitat of fish” (emphasis added).¹⁰ These longstanding legal authorities for habitat protection were bolstered and emphasized in the 2007 re-authorization of the MSA, which reinforced existing authority by adding new provisions for protection of DSC, and by adding an explicit and broad authority for FMPs to include “management measures in the plan to conserve target and non-target species and habitats, considering the variety of ecological factors affecting fishery populations.”¹¹

In addition, the Council should allow for a broad scope of potential new EFH provisions including new or modified designations of EFH for Council-managed groundfish species and new or modified EFH Conservation Areas. The Council has significant new information at hand which warrants a regulatory update to groundfish EFH designations and protections. This information includes the Phase 1 Report¹², the EFH Synthesis Report¹³, the EFHRC Phase 2 report¹⁴, and the stakeholder proposals.¹⁵ Collectively this information is sufficient to support development, consideration and analysis of updated EFH designations, modifications to existing habitat closures and/or adding new ones, as well as other measures relating to major prey species, gear modification and enforcement.

The EFH Synthesis Report shows that since EFH was last revised under this FMP, scientists have gathered more information that may better guide how and where we should fish in order to minimize adverse impacts on delicate and important areas. The report includes newly available information such as:

“updated maps of seafloor habitat types and bathymetry; ...a summary of models to predict groundfish distribution relative to habitat types, as well as trophic and ecosystem models useful for groundfish EFH; ... summaries of new information on the life history and habitat requirements of the 91 species in the Pacific Groundfish FMP; ...updated information on threats to groundfish EFH and prey species, both from fishing and non-fishing activities;”¹⁶

Include all proposed management measures contained in the remaining stakeholder proposals from Phase II of the five year EFH review, but incorporate their contents in a reorganized list of options available to the Council

We recommend that the Council retain the contents of all remaining stakeholder proposals within the scope of the amendment, but also consider incorporating their contents into a combined menu of options available to the Council and organized by the type of management measures described (e.g. EFH designations, EFH closures, gear-related regulations, etc.).

As we have previously commented¹⁷, the remaining stakeholder proposals collectively represent a diverse and valuable set of ideas for potential management revisions, and all should remain available for use in drafting a range of alternatives. In the past we also commented on the importance of retaining all the proposals because they had not yet received a rigorous independent analysis.¹⁸ Since then NOAA Fisheries has completed some preliminary analyses on the proposals.¹⁹ Their review offers intriguing possibilities including demonstrating that some proposals may protect considerable amounts of new habitat with little net impact on industry operations. However, by design this analysis stopped short of analyzing the impacts of the specific measures (e.g., proposed new EFH Conservation Areas) contained within the stakeholder proposals.²⁰ Since there may be specific new designations, protections, or re-openings in any given proposal that would fare favorably under such an analysis, either on their own or as part of a compromise package, it would be prudent to retain all the current contents within the potential scope of the action at this time.

This would have two major benefits. First, similar measures in different proposals would be organized more efficiently into categories based on their actual potential impacts. Overlap and redundancy would be more easily identified and addressed. Second, the individual merits of any given proposed measure would be more easily assessed, once divorced from the rest of the stakeholder package.

Adopt a coast wide scope for the development of a range of alternatives

Consistent with our previous recommendation in March 2014, we recommend that at this stage the Council again retain a coast wide scope for this action, allowing for the potential development of a broad range of alternatives.²¹ Once again we point out that while the Essential Fish Habitat Review Committee (EFHRC) Phase 2 Report suggests that the Council “may reasonably choose to narrow the geographic scope of Phase 3, this same recommendation also states that “there is insufficient baseline information to confirm that EFH is adequately protected.”²²

In addition, it simply seems prudent to retain a coast wide scope given the depth-based RCA is a coast wide management measure. As NOAA Fisheries also points out in the Final Rule implementing some of the 2015-2016 RCA modifications proposed by the Council, there is ongoing stakeholder interest in a broad, long-term, presumably coast wide re-examination of the catch control aspects of the RCA.²³ This same Final Rule also points out that the process would benefit from a high degree of coordination with ongoing EFH action.²⁴ To maximize the potential utility of such a coordinated action, a coast wide scope for both issues is appropriate at this stage.

Develop alternatives for a bottom trawl closure beyond 3,500 meters under authorities other than EFH

We are strongly supportive of expanding the current closure of depths greater than 700 fathoms (1,280 meters) to bottom trawling beyond its current seaward limit of 3,500 meters. The Council's original intent in Amendment 19 to the Groundfish FMP, as passed in 2005, was to include these areas in a bottom trawl closure extending from the 700 fathom line to the edge of the US Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ).²⁵ However, NOAA Fisheries unfortunately did not approve and implement this closure beyond the seaward depth limit of groundfish EFH: 3,500 meters (calculated based on the deepest observation of groundfish at 3,400 meters plus a precautionary 100 meter buffer).²⁶

The primary justification for the disapproval offered by NOAA Fisheries' was that in the view of the agency the Council's intent to protect areas not identified as EFH, but to do so under EFH authority, was not consistent with the MSA.²⁷ The agency also stated that there were no other MSA authorities available at that time sufficient for the task.²⁸ However, as previously discussed, the authority for habitat protections in this fragile portion of the ecosystem has long been available in the MSA. The "conservation and management" called for in the very title of the law is defined broadly to include measures to "rebuild, restore, or maintain....any fishery resource and the marine environment" (emphasis added) and intended to assure that adverse effects are avoided.²⁹ Furthermore, the fishery resources referred to in the definition of conservation and management are also defined in the MSA to include "any species of fish, and any habitat of fish" (emphasis added).³⁰

NOAA Fisheries did recognize the merits of the Council's proposal, acknowledging that the seafloor beyond 3,500 meters includes "hard bottom areas with biogenic habitats such as deep sea corals" and that "all or most of the deep sea environments are likely to be highly sensitive to impact, including very low levels of fishing effort (e.g. a single trawl)."³¹

In its Record of Decision, NOAA Fisheries indicated it was supportive of the type of ecosystem-based and precautionary action the Council sought to take in the deepwater areas beyond 3,500 meters.³² NOAA Fisheries also stated their view that given appropriate authority it would authorize the measures, referring specifically to MSA re-authorization proposals submitted by NOAA Fisheries in 2005 that contained new authorities for "conservation and management measures applicable to fishery resources throughout the fishery ecosystem."³³ While we again point out that in fact sufficient authority already existed at that time, this longstanding authority was ultimately reinforced in the 2007 MSA reauthorization in a manner very consistent with the NOAA Fisheries proposal.

A comparison is useful. The NOAA Fisheries MSA reauthorization bill put forward by the agency in 2005 included a proposed new addition to the list of discretionary components of FMPs in Section 303(b) of the MSA that would allow Councils to include measures in FMPs to:

“incorporate conservation and management measures necessary to protect and enhance the health and productivity of fishery ecosystems.”³⁴

Language essentially the same as that ecosystem-oriented provision proposed by NOAA Fisheries did make it into the MSA reauthorization bill ultimately passed by Congress and signed into law in 2007:

“management measures in the plan to conserve target and non-target species and habitats, considering the variety of ecological factors affecting fishery populations.”³⁵

In essence, existing legal authorities for habitat protection were bolstered and emphasized in that 2007 re-authorization, which reinforced existing authority by adding new provisions for protection of DSC and by adding an explicit and broad authority for FMPs to include conservation and management measures to protect habitat, including habitat of non-target species.³⁶

We urge the Council to include an option to expand the current deepwater bottom trawl closure in the scope of this amendment using MSA authority to conserve and manage to protect the environment and habitat, as recently bolstered by the addition of FMP authority to implement ecosystem-based measures to protect non-target habitats. Protection of this pristine and largely unexplored area would be highly consistent with the principles of EBFM. Almost twenty years ago, in its report to Congress, the Ecosystem Principles Advisory Panel (EPAP) articulated basic policies for implementing EBFM that included two key suggestions the Council can fulfill with a trawl footprint expansion: proactively evaluate the effects of potential new fisheries in advance and apply the precautionary approach.³⁷ The EPAP also articulates the importance of habitat protection in its report for both target and non-target species.³⁸

This action is also consistent with national priorities and strategies articulated by NOAA Fisheries calling for increased protection of ocean habitat. The NOAA “Habitat Blueprint” includes a guiding principle that calls for managers to “Anticipate and address changes to coastal and ocean habitats due to environmental change; including development, climate, and other pressures.”³⁹ Leading NOAA habitat scientists, in a briefing paper presented at the May 2013 Managing Our Nation’s Fisheries conference, presented additional detail on a precautionary and ecosystem-based NOAA Fisheries vision for habitat protection that drew in part on this Habitat Blueprint:

*“In 2005, the U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy recommended that NOAA Fisheries change the designation of essential fish habitat from a species-by-species to a multispecies approach and, ultimately, to an ecosystem-based approach that includes consideration of ecologically valuable species that are not necessarily commercially important...there is already scientific and societal consensus on the importance of certain habitat types based on their contributions as fish habitat, biodiversity and ecosystem services. These include...deep-sea coral communities.”*⁴⁰

It is helpful to briefly consider just how valuable and special this vast area of largely unexplored seafloor is, and some of the emerging new information about it. New research shows that the deep sea is critically important to human society and must be carefully stewarded and studied. For instance, it serves as an important carbon sink in a time when carbon is increasingly a pollutant of global concern.⁴¹ It harbors half of all marine biomass.⁴² And it is far from the lifeless and static mud it was previously thought to be. Instead, we now know that it and the life it harbors can change swiftly, including in response to human-induced change in the shallow oceans found shoreward of it.⁴³ These remote ocean deeps are also by no means immune to the effects of climate change and ocean acidification.⁴⁴

Finally, we note that significant analysis has already been conducted on the application of a trawl closure in this area in the Amendment 19 FEIS, and much of it remains applicable.⁴⁵ This should reduce the analytical and record-building burdens associated with alternatives for this portion of the amendment, with commensurate savings in staff time and other resources.

Prioritize the protection of deep-sea corals (DSC) and other structure-forming invertebrates

DSC are long-lived, slow to reproduce, fragile, bottom-dwelling animals that generally grow at depths greater than 50 meters, but they have been found as far offshore as the abyssal plains, even as deep as 6,000 meters (~20,000 feet).⁴⁶ They enhance biodiversity and are thought to be comparable in this regard to shallow-water reefs.⁴⁷

Yet in contrast to their shallow-water cousins, DSC and their ecosystems are poorly understood. Scientists are just beginning to explore these environments, and yet they have already documented that over half of the approximately 5,100 coral species alive today are found below the reach of the sun's rays.⁴⁸ Although DSC is not as well understood as shallow water coral, science has already benefitted significantly from these ocean-bottom communities. For example, because DSC are so long-lived, they have been used to better understand ancient ocean circulation patterns via isotope analysis, shedding light on historic patterns of climate change,⁴⁹ and they absorb CO₂ in the ocean.⁵⁰

EFH is defined as much more than the "classic" interpretation of rocky reefs. While those are extremely important, so are other types of seafloor, or living habitat like corals and sponges.⁵¹ Scientists refer to cold water corals found in deep shelf, slope, and abyssal plain habitats as "ecosystem engineers" because of their role as a basic building block for fish habitat and their ability to form structures used by invertebrates as well as fish.⁵²

We are supportive of a flexible approach wherein the same FMP amendment could potentially protect DSC shoreward of 3,500 meters (the current extent of Groundfish EFH based on known groundfish distribution) using EFH authorities, and protect them seaward of 3,500 meters utilizing other MSA authorities, such as the authority in Section 303(b) of the MSA. As such, we request that the Council keep all available options open at this time and prioritize the protection of known and predicted habitat-forming invertebrate species and their preferred substrates.

Adopt a process and schedule for further development of the FMP amendment

At this time the Council is tentatively scheduled to review and adopt a range of alternatives at the September 2015 Council meeting, as currently planned on a provisional basis in the Council's Preliminary Year at a Glance Summary.⁵³ We request that the Council maintain this timeline and also tentatively schedule the adoption of Preliminary Preferred Alternatives (PPA) for the April 2016 Council meeting. We also understand that the formation of a Plan Development Team or Plan Amendment Team may be appropriate and helpful at this stage and would be supportive of such a step.

In conclusion, we would like to make two additional suggestions. First, the Council should support ongoing collaborative efforts to explore the possibility of consensus recommendations on management alternatives addressing both habitat and other area-based management reforms. Beginning in spring 2014 a small group of industry and NGO participants began informal discussions and port meetings exploring whether consensus recommendations on EFH revisions, potentially in concert with other management measures, could be developed.⁵⁴ These ongoing discussions contributed to a decision by the Council to delay scoping for the planned FMP amendment from September 2014 to April 2015.⁵⁵ Pew, while not directly participating in the collaborative discussions to date, has supported the process, receives regular updates from participants, and looks forward to reviewing any potential outcomes from the discussions. We also suggest that retaining a broad scope for the amendment is one of the best ways to support these ongoing discussions. A broad scope will provide the maximum amount of flexibility to later accommodate the widest possible range of recommendations from these discussions.

Second, as the Council continues its development of this amendment and its associated analytical products and alternatives, we would like to again draw attention to five core tenets of EFH identification and protection and suggest that the Council apply these to its forthcoming decision-making. These are distilled from the EFH Guidelines, though we also suggest that they have broad applicability to other habitat-related management actions, especially the importance of applying an ecosystem-based approach to such management. We previously described these five key tenets in our November 2013 correspondence, where we provide additional detail, but briefly they are as follows:⁵⁶

- Utilize an Ecosystem-Based Approach
- Seek to Improve on Current Protections
- Consider all Life Stages of Managed Species
- Develop and Utilize the Best Scientific Information Available
- Protect a Wide Array of Habitat Types

We again thank the Council for its ongoing efforts to identify and protect marine habitats, including EFH for groundfish species. A comprehensive amendment to the groundfish FMP addressing EFH, other habitat needs, and adjustments to various area-based management measures in one holistic package has tremendous potential to increase both fishery profitability and ecosystem health.

We look forward to further engagement with the Council on these issues as the amendment progresses, and thank the Council for the opportunity to provide these scoping comments.

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

Thank you for your past work to protect ocean habitat, including the recently concluded five-year review of Essential Fish Habitat for groundfish. The Council is now well positioned to find many win-win possibilities for habitat protection and the fishing economy, thanks to a stakeholder-driven process in the five-year review along with ongoing collaborative discussions between fishermen and conservation advocates.

In considering the upcoming amendment to the management plan for groundfish, I urge the Council to advance the following:

- Closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3,500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge.
- A coastwide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan.
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat (EFH).
- Potential creation of new EFH Conservation Areas or adjustment of current EFH Conservation Areas.
- Inclusion of all remaining stakeholder proposals as potential alternatives.
- Adjustment of area-based management measures such as the Rockfish Conservation Area to improve fishing while also protecting habitat.
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear.
- Designation of key prey species of groundfish.

Healthy marine habitats ensure a sustainable supply of fish for commercial and recreational fisheries. But these essential places—which contain deep-sea corals, sponges, and seamounts—can be damaged by fishing gear such as bottom trawls. I urge the Council to move habitat protection forward and seek a broad set of solutions for fishing communities and a healthy ocean.

Thank you for your time,

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

I write to you as the President of the Ocean Conservation Society, a California nonprofit organization dedicated to conducting marine mammal research and advocating for marine conservation. In addition to collecting hard data, we are also invested in community outreach and public engagement; the problems that our oceans face cannot be solved by science alone. Although our work mainly revolves around cetaceans, we understand that it is not enough to save the marine animals that everyone knows and loves. Whales and dolphins are part of a complex food web, encompassed by an even more intricate ecosystem, all of which needs to be considered when creating appropriate fishery management decisions. As our name suggests, conservation of the entire ocean is an endeavor that we try to uphold, and one that we readily support.

The Council has accomplished momentous work in protecting ocean habitats, which includes the completion of its review process of Essential Fish Habitat for ground fish. There is still much to be discovered about deep-sea areas and we think it prudent to treat delicate, understudied habitats with great caution. Bottom trawling, for example, is a dangerous fishing practice that can have devastating and unpredictable consequences on the deepwater corals, sponges, seamounts and hard rocky substrates that support an abundance of life. At its upcoming April meeting, we ask the Council to consider a variety of solutions when deciding on the scope of its proposed amendment to the management plan for groundfish, some of which may include:

- Precautionary closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge;

- Adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan;
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat;
- Potential creation of new EFH Conservation Areas or adjustment of current EFH Conservation Areas;
- Inclusion of the contents of all remaining Stakeholder Proposals as potential alternatives;
- Adjusting area-based management measures like the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) to improve fishing while also protecting habitat;
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear;
- Identifying key prey species of groundfish.

The Ocean Conservation Society can do its best and most effective work when whales and dolphins are not unnecessarily threatened by a degrading ecosystem. We believe that the Council is equipped with enough scientific evidence and stakeholder support to maintain the economic integrity of current fisheries while protecting key ocean habitats. We look forward to a positive and progressive decision from the Council and hope to continue to work together in caring for our oceans.

Sincerely,

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

We write to you as the owners and chefs of the Border Grill restaurants. At all of our locations, we are invested in sourcing and serving the freshest and most environmentally sustainable ingredients. In addition to feeding our customers modern Mexican dishes, we also try to feed them knowledge to inspire a sense of environmental awareness. Ecological literacy is a skill that is acquired through engagement, whether in a classroom or a restaurant, does not make much difference. However, in order for people to make better informed choices, they must first understand which and why certain options are more environmentally sound. We hope the Council will consider this “Look before you leap” principle in establishing a model of ecosystem-based management.

We applaud the Council for its perseverance in protecting ocean habitats. We understand that in 2006, a previous Fishery Management Plan amendment was disapproved. However, we believe that Council is currently in a prime position to combine stakeholder support and strong scientific evidence to enact proactive legislation for groundfish habitats. At its upcoming April meeting, we hope that the Council will consider a broad set of solutions when deciding on the scope of its FMP amendment, including:

- Precautionary closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge;
- Adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan;
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat;
- Potential creation of new, or adjustment of current, EFH Conservation Areas;
- Inclusion of the contents of all remaining Stakeholder Proposals as potential alternatives;
- Adjusting area-based management measures like the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) to improve fishing while also protecting habitat;
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear;
- Identifying key prey species of groundfish.

Most deep sea areas are completely unsurveyed, and new discoveries are constantly being made. Destructive practices, like bottom trawling, could wipe out an entire niche of the marine ecosystem before we understand what exactly we have lost. In the culinary world, “taste-testing” is always good practice; a chef should know what customers are eating before they eat it. Similarly, before the Council is forced to remediate a damaged seafloor environment, we hope it will take preventative measures for habitat protection.

Thank you for your work toward holistic preservation of the marine environment.

RE: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Habitat Amendment Scoping

Dear Ms. Lowman and Council Members:

Ocean Conservancy¹ appreciates the opportunity to provide comment for the Pacific Fishery Management Council's scoping for revisions to the groundfish essential fish habitat (EFH) program. We urge the Council to adopt a scope for this action that is sufficiently broad to:

- include a full range of public proposals, including each element of the comprehensive conservation proposal Ocean Conservancy co-proposed with Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC) and Oceana²;
- include options for addressing potential impacts to EFH by midwater trawling,
- include protecting waters of the Economic Exclusive Zone (EEZ) deeper than 3500 meters from bottom trawling without designating them as EFH; and
- include potential changes in Rockfish Conservation Areas.

Ocean Conservancy also supports the ongoing collaborative discussions between conservation and industry representatives aimed at producing common ground recommendations on EFH, and we believe a broad amendment scope will aid this effort.

The NRDC /Oceana/Ocean Conservancy proposal recommends a series of additional and revised EFH Conservation Areas, including nine areas reopened to groundfish trawling, based on review of benthic habitats, coral and sponge observations, and other information newly added to the body of EFH science since Amendment 19. This proposal ranked exceptionally well in the dual EFH program goals of maximizing habitat protection and minimizing impacts to the groundfish trawl industry in the report prepared by National Marine

² NRDC, Oceana, OC, Proposal to the Pacific Fishery Management Council to Modify Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Designation, Conservation, and Enforcement (July 31, 2013), available at ftp://ftp.pcouncil.org/pub/GF_EFH_Review%202011-2012/Oceana.NRDC.OC/.

Fisheries Service (NMFS) and submitted to the Council in September, 2014,³ and should be included in full as an analyzed alternative in scoping groundfish EFH.

NMFS also addressed in its September 2014 report⁴ the NRDC/Oceana/OC proposal's recommendations to restrict bottom contact by midwater trawling within EFH Conservation Areas, indicating substantial evidence that midwater trawls contact bottom with some regularity. This finding suggests that alternative measures to address midwater trawling over EFH Conservation Zones are properly within the scope of the current EFH action.

Ocean Conservancy strongly supports the policy goal of preventing impacts to poorly mapped and understood habitats beyond the 3500 meter boundary of formal EFH designation. The Council has at least two options under general Magnuson-Stevenson Act authority to provide precautionary protection for these habitats without formal designation as groundfish EFH: Section 303(b)(2)(A) authorizes designation of gear-based area restrictions without the requirement to engage in extensive habitat identification,⁵ and Section 303(b)(12) provides discretionary authority to conserve non-target species and habitats.⁶ We urge the Council to include options for protection of these deep habitats in the groundfish EFH amendment scope.

Finally, we strongly urge the Council to include revisions to the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) within the groundfish EFH amendment scope. The RCA was not scrutinized during Amendment 19 for important habitat areas, and revising both EFH and the RCA at the same time allows for this to occur. Moreover, the recent Marine Stewardship Council certification relied on the existence of the RCA to mitigate habitat impacts; revising the RCA together with EFH allows for any habitat benefits of the RCA to be considered and preserved where possible. We also understand that the collaborative industry-NGO discussions encompass both changes to EFH as well and to the trawl RCA, and including both in the same Council action will facilitate these conversations.

In conclusion, Ocean Conservancy urges the Council to adopt a broad scope for the groundfish EFH amendment in order to provide for a thoughtful assessment of possible actions, alternatives and impacts during the Council's decision making and environmental review.

Sincerely,

Greg Heims

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

I write to you as a concerned marine biologist, who has come to know and love the waters of Southern California. For the last 12 years, I have worked to restore the kelp forests off the coast of Orange County, and can attest to the benefits of ecosystem-based management. Each year I never tire of watching juvenile fish migrate through the kelp forests or observing the rejuvenation of life that comes with seasonal upwellings. Through my scientific and advocacy work, I am constantly reminded of the importance of community: the marine ecosystem has many parts to its whole, and human cooperation is necessary for ocean conservation.

I applaud the Council for its continued focus on protecting ocean habitats and am hopeful that the amendment process for its Groundfish Fishery Management Plan will fortify safeguards for habitat preservation. Deepsea corals, sponges and seamounts represent some of the least documented, least understood areas of the ocean, and I believe the Council would be remiss to deny proper protections. At its upcoming April meeting, I hope the Council will consider a broad set of solutions in determining the scope of its amendment and will incorporate the following measures:

- Re-examine a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan;
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat;
- Adjusting area-based management measures like the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) to improve fishing while also protecting habitat;
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear;

Habitat conservation necessitates an all-encompassing approach when identifying which habitats are “important.” In truth, they are all important for a healthy, fully functioning Pacific Ocean. The Council has an opportunity to protect the deep sea environment from destructive practices, like bottom trawling, and build toward a model of ecosystem-based management. I look forward to hearing about the Council's positive impact on Southern California waters.

Thank you for your work to protect key ocean habitats.

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

I write to you on behalf of Pacific Environment, a non-profit organization that is driven to protect the living environment of the Pacific Rim. From a broad platform of environmental protection, we are invested in solving issues that revolve around biodiversity, climate change, energy, and freshwater and marine ecosystems. In California in particular, we understand just how important the ocean is to economic, social and cultural sensibilities. Fortunately, the California coast is already dotted with various Marine Protected Areas, but many more gains can be made toward habitat protection. The marine ecosystem is highly complex, and when one region is failing or suffering, the negative effects can reverberate on multiple levels. We think it is important to proactively protect potentially threatened areas, in order for our enjoyment of the ocean to be responsible and sustainable.

We offer our congratulations to the Council for its past work in ocean habitat protection. Completing its 5-year review of Essential Fish Habitat for groundfish is a laudable accomplishment, and we hope that the upcoming amendment process will be just as successful. Because much of our work is community-based, we appreciate the Council's attempts to incorporate stakeholder input. We agree with that reconciling fisheries management with environmental protection necessitates a careful balancing act. In weighing all options currently at the Council's disposal, we hope that the upcoming April meeting will generate a decision on the scope of the proposed amendment, and will make the following considerations: precautionary closure to bottom trawling off the California coast, adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan, designation of new Essential Fish Habitat, creation or adjustment of EFH Conservation Areas, inclusion of all remaining stakeholder proposals, evaluation of bottom trawling fishing gear and identification of key prey species of groundfish. Although groundfish may not rank among the charismatic fauna that people know and love, they are no less important to the overall health of the ecosystem. To be as comprehensive as possible, we urge the Council to expand protective legislation over the fragile deep-sea habitats that we still know little about.

The Pacific Rim boasts of an ecological diversity that is imperative to appreciate and conserve. The ocean is an integral part of many coastal communities and we must do our best to prevent, rather than ameliorate, environmental degradation. We hope the Council will take this opportunity to fortify its Fishery Management Plan amendment with wide-reaching measures that will optimize positive impact on the ocean's habitats and its fisheries.

Thank you for continued efforts in protecting critical marine habitats.

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members:

I write to you on behalf of the Endangered Habitats League, a non-profit organization that is dedicated to preserving natural habitats in Southern California. The Southern California region is one of the world's most biologically diverse, and many of our plant and animal species are threatened with extinction. One of our major endeavors has been to establish an unprecedented, interconnected system of nature reserves, and by working with the business and local government communities, we have proudly found great success. However, there is still much more work to be done, and we hope that the Council will extend protections over deep sea habitats off the California coast.

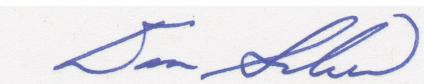

We congratulate the Council for its achievements in protecting ocean habitats. The recent conclusion of its 5-year review process of groundfish Essential Fish Habitat represents one of the Council's progressive moves toward ecosystem-based management. At its upcoming April meeting, we hope the Council can capitalize upon the strength of current stakeholder and scientific support by establishing a comprehensive amendment to its Groundfish Fishery Management Plan. With a broad set of available solutions, we urge the Council to complete its scoping process in consideration of the following measures:

- Precautionary closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge;
- Adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan;
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat;
- Potential creation of new, or adjustment of current, EFH Conservation Areas;
- Inclusion of the contents of all remaining Stakeholder Proposals as potential alternatives;
- Adjusting area-based management measures like the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) to improve fishing while also protecting habitat;
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear;
- Identifying key prey species of groundfish.

Unsustainable fishing practices, like bottom trawling, can have devastating effects on the seafloor environment. Habitat degradation is the second leading cause of species extinction, and we cannot afford to further jeopardize any part of the marine ecosystem. Scientists do not fully understand the extent or importance of deep sea biotic and abiotic interactions, indicating that proactive protection is necessary to mitigate unintended consequences. We hope that the Council will remain persistent in preserving important ocean habitats.

Thank you for your efforts toward habitat conservation.

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

I write to you on behalf of One Market Restaurant, an establishment in San Francisco that is known for offering a thoughtful and sophisticated dining experience. After more than 20 years in the culinary world, I came to One Market in 2004 with a mind to focus on farm-to-table food. Every day we try our best to blend fresh, seasonal California ingredients, using classic French techniques, to create inspired dishes. We understand the importance of sourcing locally and sustainably, be it produce, meats or seafood. I like to think that good food represents both indulgence and gift. In order to be able to serve our customers the same quality and quantity of food for years to come, we must treat the land and sea with the respect that it deserves.

We are grateful for the Council's work in protecting ocean habitats. A healthy, fully functioning ocean is imperative for conservation and culinary interests, alike. At its upcoming April meeting, we hope the Council can further develop its vision for habitat protection by completing the scoping process for its proposed Groundfish Fishery Management Plan amendment. The Council has many options to weigh in finalizing its decision, and we urge the Council to incorporate the following measures:

- Precautionary closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge;
- Adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan;
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat;
- Potential creation of new, or adjustment of current, EFH Conservation Areas;
- Inclusion of the contents of all remaining Stakeholder Proposals as potential alternatives;
- Adjusting area-based management measures like the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) to improve fishing while also protecting habitat;
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear;
- Identifying key prey species of groundfish.

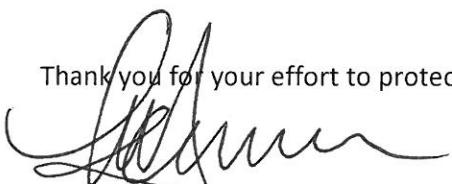

Two of the greatest joys of cooking are experimentation and discovery. Although I have spent more time in a kitchen than a lab, I would imagine that science engenders the same kind of excitement. The seafloor one of the least documented, least understood areas of the ocean and allowing destructive practices, like bottom trawling, to continue would forfeit a spectacular learning opportunity. We hope

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

I write to you on behalf of Harney Sushi, an award-winning sushi bar in San Diego. At both of our locations, we pride ourselves on providing diners with excellent food and an unforgettable experience. All of the seafood that we serve meets guidelines established by NOAA, the Monterey Bay Aquarium and the Marine Stewardship Council. Having access to some of the best seafood in Southern California is equal parts blessing and opportunity, allowing us to showcase sustainable ingredients while creating a sense of environmental awareness. The Pacific Ocean is a crucial resource, for culinary interests and beyond, and we understand the importance of protecting every nook and cranny of its 64 million square miles.

We would like to applaud the Council for its past work in preserving ocean habitats, including its recent completion of a 5-year review of Essential Fish Habitat for groundfish. The Council has already demonstrated its commitment to protecting California deepwater areas and the seafloor environment. At the upcoming April meeting, we encourage the Council to build on its momentum by completing the scoping process for the Groundfish Fishery Management Plan. While keeping in mind a broad set of habitat solutions, we ask the Council to ensure: precautionary closure to bottom trawling in deepwater areas along the California coast, adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan, potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat, potential creation or adjustment of EFH Conservation Areas, adjustment of area-based management measures to improve fishing while protecting habitat, introduction of measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear and identification of key prey species of groundfish. As important as species-level protection can be, we cannot afford to neglect the areas that marine organisms call home. Just as we depend on the ocean's fisheries, we should also be mindful of what those fisheries need to thrive. Rich, biodiverse habitats are crucial for maintaining the overall health of an ecosystem, which is the ultimate goal of ecosystem-based management. For customers and chefs alike, it is easy to forget that a plate of sushi is the end product of a long and involved process. Without taking for granted the bounty of the sea, we need to be responsible for the ways in which we continue to enjoy seafood.

Now with greater authority, and bolstered by sufficient scientific evidence and stakeholder support, the Council is in a position to effect proactive protection for seafloor habitats. In moving forward with Phase 3 of its review process, we hope that the Council will take action against the destructive practice of bottom trawling and will strengthen measures to preserve the deep-sea environment. At Harney Sushi, every dish is carefully composed to create a layer of flavors; each layer is important to the cohesiveness of the entire dish. Similarly, all types of habitat--even the unseen or the little known--are important for a fully functioning marine ecosystem.

Thank you for your commitment to protecting important ocean habitats.

Dustin Summerville, President

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

I appreciate that you have done so much good work in recent times in protecting marine environments for long term sustainable yields. I think the process of collaboration between fishermen and conservation advocates will continue to give good outcomes for all.

I would like to see similar good work on any amendment to the management plan for groundfish.

Would you please consider looking at a whole coast approach and with specific areas held off limits for the near future.

This may require granting special status to selected areas (for habitat protection) and the halting of bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3,500 meters) off California. I am not sure how you can stop trawlers gouging up the bottom, but it worth trying to prevent this to maintain marine biodiversity.

Re: Agenda Item E.5 Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

My adventure through the culinary world has taken me through various professional kitchens, specialty programs, food competitions and educational outreach projects. Each endeavor has been an exciting opportunity and I would like to think that these experiences, collectively, have made me a better chef. No matter where I am or what I am doing, I try my best to source and use the most sustainable ingredients. The merits of even the most accomplished chef are worthless if he has nothing to work with. From a culinary perspective, humans have a deep connection and strong dependence on the land and sea, and we need to treat our environment with the respect that it deserves.

I would like to thank the Council for its persistent efforts in habitat protection. The Council has made great progress in achieving its goals for groundfish Essential Fish Habitat, and I hope that the amendment process for its Groundfish Fishery Management Plan will be equally as successful. At its upcoming April meeting, I urge the Council to consider a broad set of solutions when deciding upon the scope of its amendment, including:

- Precautionary closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge;
- Adoption of a coast-wide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan;
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat;
- Potential creation of new EFH Conservation Areas or adjustment of current EFH Conservation Areas;
- Inclusion of the contents of all remaining Stakeholder Proposals as potential alternatives;
- Adjusting area-based management measures like the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) to improve fishing while also protecting habitat;
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear;
- Identifying key prey species of groundfish.

Although I do not claim to be a marine biologist, I do know a thing or about cohesiveness. In a professional kitchen, every member of the team needs to work together to thoughtfully, but efficiently, prepare each dish. Every dish should have a balance of flavors that complement and highlight each other. Similarly, the ocean supports a biogeochemical matrix that must function as a whole. I hope the Council will consider the importance of all habitats--from the surface to the seafloor--in striving for the model of ecosystem-based management.

Thank you for your work to protect key ocean habitats.

Dear Members of the Council,

With regard to your upcoming discussion regarding the Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat amendment, Marine Conservation Institute requests that the Council allow all submitted EFH proposals, including our own, to move forward as part of the scope of this EFH amendment and included in the range of alternatives being considered.

We believe our proposal introduces unique areas and management measures (no bottom contact) that have not been put forward in other proposals and utilizes the best available science for areas that remain unsurveyed. We also believe it is premature and improper to eliminate entire EFH proposals put forward by some organizations and not others on the basis of workload, particularly when the proposals adhered to the criteria in the Council's Request For Proposals and are justified based on the best available science and the legal requirements of Essential Fish Habitat. There are very likely to be select areas within each of the proposals that warrant consideration and analysis by the Council to make an informed decision. All of the areas submitted in all of the EFH proposals should be evaluated.

Marine Conservation Institute also takes issue with past claims that the predictive models and by extension potential EFH areas identified in our proposal are "not ready for prime time" and/or "only useful for guiding research". The methods used to derive the areas put forward in our EFH proposal have been peer-reviewed and published in scientific journals. Before making conclusions about the scientific merits of the predictive models and their use in management decisions, we ask that the Council request a review by its Scientific and Statistical Committee.

Marine Conservation Institute hopes the Council will recognize the utility of these models for identifying new or modified EFH conservation areas on the West Coast, particularly in locations where the model results are the best available science. We also believe the peer-reviewed publications and active use of predictive habitat models for management purposes being undertaken in other U.S. regions should dispel the notion that model results are only useful for research purposes. Finally, we are very willing to help the Council staff highlight the key areas where the predictive habitat modeling can bring additional valuable information into the Council's analysis to make an informed decision.

Sincerely,

Lance Morgan and John Guinotte

RE: Agenda Item E.5 - Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat Amendment Scoping, Including RCA and Area Adjustments

Dear Chair Lowman and Members of the Council:

The Pew Charitable Trusts has collected 9,140 comments urging the Council to move habitat protection forward and seek a broad set of solutions for fishing communities and a healthy ocean.

Please include the attached petition as an electronic submission on the web site for the Council's supplemental briefing book. The petition itself is included here, along with the names, cities and states of individual signers that were gathered as of April 1, 2015. The Council may continue to receive additional comments in the days ahead.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Tom Rudolph

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members,

Thank you for your past work to protect ocean habitat, including the recently concluded five-year review of Essential Fish Habitat for groundfish. The Council is now well positioned to find many win-win possibilities for habitat protection and the fishing economy, thanks to a stakeholder-driven process in the five-year review along with ongoing collaborative discussions between fishermen and conservation advocates.

In considering the upcoming amendment to the management plan for groundfish, I urge the Council to advance the following:

- Closure to bottom trawling of the deepwater areas (beyond 3,500 meters) off California south of the Mendocino Ridge.
- A coastwide scope for potential changes to the groundfish management plan.
- Potential designation of new Essential Fish Habitat (EFH).
- Potential creation of new EFH Conservation Areas or adjustment of current EFH Conservation Areas.
- Inclusion of all remaining stakeholder proposals as potential alternatives.
- Adjustment of area-based management measures such as the Rockfish Conservation Area to improve fishing while also protecting habitat.
- Measures to address bottom contact by midwater trawl fishing gear.
- Designation of key prey species of groundfish.

Healthy marine habitats ensure a sustainable supply of fish for commercial and recreational fisheries. But these essential places—which contain deep-sea corals, sponges, and seamounts—can be damaged by fishing gear such as bottom trawls. I urge the Council to move habitat protection forward and seek a broad set of solutions for fishing communities and a healthy ocean.

Thank you for your time,
