RE: Agenda Item F.4, Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat and Rockfish Conservation Area
Amendment 28 Alternatives

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members:

We are writing in support of the collaborative proposal for changes to groundfish Essential Fish Habitat (EFH) and the Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA).

The collaborative proposal is the result of an unprecedented outreach process, involving over thirty port meetings and reaching over fifty participants in the groundfish bottom trawl industry. Beyond the formal port meetings, participants in the collaborative process also engaged in numerous small-group and individual meetings to gather information and assess potential solutions.

The final collaborative package is a thoroughly vetted set of changes that will improve both fishing opportunity and habitat protection. In terms of fishing opportunity, the changes contained in the collaborative proposal were designed with direct industry input and represent the most high-value areas for restoring trawl tows. In terms of habitat protection, high-value sensitive habitat areas were identified by combining fishermen's knowledge with scientific data, and workable boundary lines were drawn that protect a significant amount of this habitat.

Council members are likely familiar with the collaborative group's efforts by this point, so we will not go into further detail on our process or outcomes.

The only new point to mention at this stage is in regards to analysis of the proposals. Specifically, the collaborative proposal is based partly on fishermen's knowledge of the seafloor and historical fishing practices, and for this reason, the benefits of the proposed changes may not be fully captured in project team (or other) analytics.

As an example, take the Brush Patch, an area of high coral density off Northern California. This area was identified by fishermen as a coral-rich spot with mixed substrate, yet the data layers showed no hard or mixed substrate and no particular concentration of coral or sponge observations. A shape was drawn in the port meetings, to protect the area identified by fishermen. Later, a NOAA dive report validated that this was an area with significant amounts of corals (see <https://swfsc.noaa.gov/publications/TM/SWFSC/NOAA-TM-NMFS-SWFSC-556.pdf>). This is an area of high conservation value, but because fishermen's knowledge (and a later dive report) are not possible to incorporate into GIS, it appears as a low value area in the analysis.

Overall, we believe the changes contained in the collaborative proposal are well thought out and reflect the "best available knowledge" of the seafloor. To get a better understanding of the proposed changes, and why each change makes sense, we urge Council members to read our proposal. The proposal carefully documents the rationale for each area, and contains maps and other supporting information. The final version of the proposal is available at: ftp://ftp.pcouncil.org/pub/EFH\_Archives/EFH\_Proposals\_2013/Collaborative%20Proposal%20/Collaborative%20Package%20Final%20Nov%202016.pdf.

We are also happy to answer any questions about the collaborative proposal, and all of us will be at the November Council meeting.

RE: Agenda Item F.4, Essential Fish Habitat & Rockfish Conservation Area Alternatives

Dear Chair Pollard and Council members:

Thank you for your interest and leadership in moving forward with the protection of essential fish habitat (EFH) off the U.S. West Coast. The Pacific Fishery Management Council ("Council") has long recognized that seafloor habitat protection is fundamental to maintaining vibrant groundfish fisheries, and it has a track record of leadership on this pillar of ecosystem-based management. Following a deliberate, step-wise EFH review and public process, the Council is now scheduled to adopt preliminary preferred alternatives for both EFH and rockfish conservation area (RCA) modifications. Oceana writes to urge adoption of the Oceana et al. coastwide EFH conservation alternative 1c. In combination with adoption of this EFH alternative, Oceana supports RCA alternative 3b which would lift the coastwide RCA south of Pt. Chehalis, WA.

As evidenced by all available metrics in the analysis provided by the EFH Project Team,<sup>1</sup> the cumulative effect of these two combined EFH and RCA alternatives will result in a win-win scenario for habitat conservation and groundfish bottom trawl fisheries by protecting priority habitats like coldwater corals, sponges, rocky reefs and submarine canyons, while simultaneously restoring previously displaced trawl effort. Alternatively, while Oceana supports some proposed EFH conservation areas in EFH Alternative 1b (collaborative), the Project Team's analysis indicates regional gaps in habitat protection, a net loss in total area protected, and a net loss in priority habitat features protected when combined with opening the trawl RCA (RCA alternative 3b).<sup>2</sup>

In April 2016, the Council adopted several important components of a preliminary preferred alternative (PPA), including a precautionary approach for waters deeper than 3,500 m, and we reaffirm our support for those aspects of the PPA.

I. Background

Protecting ocean habitats is critical to responsible fishery management. It is necessary for ensuring long-term sustainable and productive fisheries, vibrant coastal communities and healthy marine ecosystems. As you know, the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (MSA), 16 U.S.C. § 1801 et seq., requires NMFS and Councils to “describe and identify essential fish habitat,” “minimize to the extent practicable adverse effects on such habitat caused by fishing, and identify other actions to encourage the conservation and enhancement of such habitat.”<sup>3</sup>

Through the EFH review process, the Council correctly recognized that it has an ongoing responsibility to protect EFH, by among other things, reviewing the EFH regulations and proposing updates to them in response to new information and data.<sup>4</sup> As the Groundfish Fishery Management Plan (FMP) states, “[p]rotecting, conserving, and enhancing EFH are long-term goals of the Council, and these EFH provisions . . . are an important element in the Council’s commitment to a better understanding, and conservation and management, of Pacific Coast groundfish populations and their habitat needs.”<sup>5</sup>

Regarding the impacts of bottom trawling, it is widely recognized in scientific studies and literature reviews that bottom trawling causes significant adverse impacts to seafloor habitats.<sup>6</sup> The literature documenting the effects of bottom trawling is substantial and there is general scientific consensus that bottom trawling has wide ranging effects on habitats and ecosystems. The effects of bottom trawling include reduced seafloor habitat complexity, changes in species composition, reduced productivity and reduced biodiversity.<sup>7</sup> Bottom trawl gear can crush, displace, expose and bury marine life on the seafloor; and habitats that are trawled are far more likely to have reduced overall species diversity. Significant bottom trawl impacts occur in both hard and soft sediment habitats.<sup>8</sup>

In addition, the scientific literature has also continued to affirm the basis for the priority habitats identified by the Council in Amendment 19. For example, since 2005, several new studies have further identified associations between FMP groundfish and biogenic habitats including corals and sponges.<sup>9</sup> Furthermore, the additional evidence confirming the longevity of deep sea corals<sup>10</sup> and sponges since 2005 affirms the long recovery time of such biogenic habitats, and thus the conclusion that damage or removal of these habitat features would not be temporary in nature. Together, the information compiled in this EFH 5-year review reaffirms the Council's precautionary, science-based approach to EFH management.

II. Oceana requests adoption of EFH Alternative 1c and RCA alternative 3b as the Council's EFH and RCA preliminary preferred alternatives.

As the Council develops its PPAs for EFH and RCA modifications, we offer the following principles to guide your action:

1. Protect areas known to contain priority habitats and increase the protection of priority habitats at the coastwide and regional scales, based on information gathered in the EFH 5-year review.
2. Prevent the expansion of bottom trawl fishing gear into areas that may contain priority habitats, as a precautionary measure.
3. Achieve a net increase in bottom trawl fishing opportunity relative to status quo.
4. Minimize displaced bottom trawl effort, except in cases where west coast groundfish observer data indicates ongoing impacts to priority habitats (i.e., coral and sponge bycatch hotspots).
5. Maintain habitat protections for priority habitats within the trawl RCA by designating them as EFH conservation areas, while opening the remainder of the trawl RCA to provide increased fishing opportunities with full accountability.

At the April 2016 meeting the Council finalized its range of alternatives for Amendment 28, including adopting proposed EFH conservation area modifications (bottom trawl openings and closures) contained in the Oceana, Natural Resources Defense Council and Ocean Conservancy July 31, 2013 proposal as a distinct alternative, with changes. The new and modified EFH conservation areas in this alternative, and the deep-water habitat conservation area, build off the approach adopted by the Council in 2005 to prohibit the geographic expansion of bottom trawling to protect areas that are potentially pristine, and to close known ecologically sensitive and important areas to bottom trawling. were made in the design of the Oceana et al. alternative to avoid significant bottom trawl effort displacement.

EFH Alternative 1c is designed to protect priority habitat features, consistent with the Pacific Coast Groundfish FMP Amendment 19 definitions of complex sensitive habitats and Habitat Areas of Particular Concern. These priority habitat features include rocky reefs and ridges, habitat-forming invertebrates and submarine canyons and gullies.

As summarized in our June 2016 report to the Council,<sup>11</sup> this alternative includes 61 EFH conservation areas/ modifications, plus seven proposed EFH conservation area openings. According to the EFH Project Team analysis, adoption of the EFH conservation area modifications in Alternative 1c would protect from bottom trawling:

- An additional 1,271 square statute miles of hard rocky reef;
- An additional 207 square miles of mixed (hard/soft) reef;
- An additional 876 square miles of submarine canyon habitat.

Based on our analysis of deep-sea coral and sponge data, the new and modified EFH conservation areas in Alternative 1c include:

- 6,378 coral observations as in the NOAA Deep Sea Coral Database, plus thousands more documented in habitat surveys since 2013;
- 7,629 sponge observations;
- An additional 2,115 square miles of predicted highly suitable coral habitat.

In order to maintain significant opportunity for the bottom trawl fleet and minimize any economic impacts or displacement, this alternative would:

- Keep open to bottom trawling approximately 30,000 square miles on the continental shelf and slope off California, Oregon and Washington - with RCA removal south of Pt. Chehalis, WA.
- Displace no more than 2.5% of recent groundfish bottom trawl effort if the trawl RCA remains fully in place, according to the EFH Project Team Report.<sup>12</sup> But, if the Council also removes the trawl RCA, the net change would result in an increase of approximately 10.6% of total coastwide bottom trawl effort.<sup>13</sup>

Importantly, as described in our September 2016 analysis submitted to the Council,<sup>14</sup> compared to the status quo and collaborative alternatives, the Oceana et al. EFH alternative combined with the opening of the core trawl RCA south of Pt. Chehalis, WA would result in a net increase in habitat conservation across the Northern, Central and Southern biogeographic regions while restoring previously displaced trawl effort.

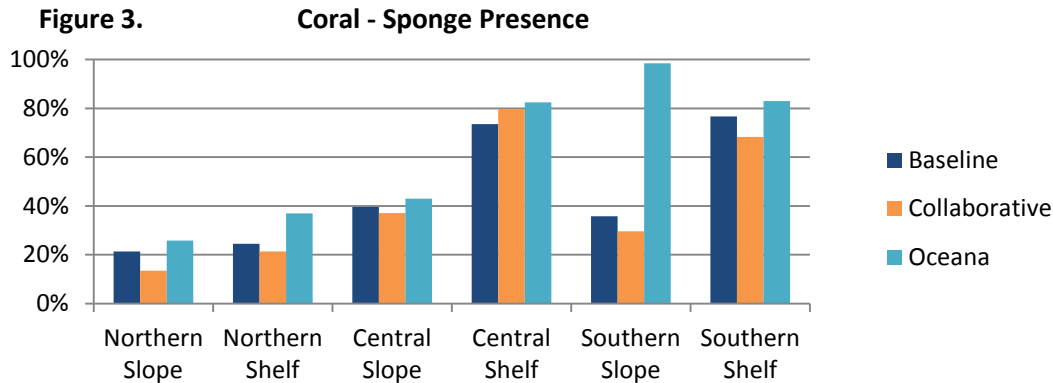

The overall net increase in habitat protection offered by Alternative 1c combined with an increase in restored fishing effort with adoption of RCA alternative 3b creates a win-win solution that meets the above described principles. What is more, based on the metric used by NMFS to determine whether the current EFH measures are practicable under the MSA (as measured by displaced effort),<sup>15</sup> Alternative 1c combined with Alternative 3b would be a 'practicable' solution for habitat conservation and sustainable fisheries.

to the continental shelf from shore to approximately 200 meters and “slope” refers to the upper slope depth zone, from approximately 200 meters to 1,280 meters depth.

A. Deficiencies in the collaborative EFH Alternative, 1b

As demonstrated in Figures 1-3 above and in our full comparative analysis submitted in September 2016,<sup>16</sup> the collaborative alternative (EFH Alt. 1b), combined with removal of the RCA south of Pt. Chehalis (RCA Alt 3b), would result in a net loss of total area closed to trawling in all biogeographic regions and coastwide. Particularly, the absence of new EFH conservation areas in the collaborative alternative off Newport, Oregon and Southern California would result in a net loss of several priority habitat features if the RCA is opened. What is more, the collaborative alternative combined with removal of the RCA south of Pt. Chehalis would reopen to trawling over half of the hard substrate that is currently closed within the trawl RCA (Figure 4). Selection of this alternative may not meet the Council’s ongoing obligation to minimize adverse effects on EFH to the extent practicable.

Some areas provide common ground between the Oceana et al. EFH Alternative 1c and the collaborative EFH alternative 1b. For example, the Oceana et al. Alternative 1c is identical to the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary proposal and the collaborative EFH alternative at 13 of the 15 areas originally proposed by the Sanctuary. Oceana’s proposal at Nitinat Canyon off the north coast of Washington is highly similar to the collaborative proposal area and proposal areas at Quinault Canyon (off Washington) and Blunts Reef (off northern California) are nearly identical. We appreciate some concepts put forward in areas in the collaborative proposal like the “Brush Patch” off northern California (maps 10 and 11) which contains additional areas of sensitive habitat not included in Alternative 1c. The collaborative alternative also includes a sizable portion of the Farallon Escarpment.

The collaborative proposal, however, misses other key areas like the Astoria Canyonhead (map 1), Hydrate Ridge (maps 6 and 7), Heceta Bank (map 8), Noyo Canyonhead (map 16), East Santa Lucia Bank (map 21), and others. These and the others that are highlighted in the attached maps are part of the reason why combined with opening the trawl RCA, there is a net loss in total area protected, a loss in protection for some priority habitat features, and a loss for certain biogeographic regions and National Marine Sanctuaries. The attached maps show ecologically important habitats in Oceana et al. alternative 1c that are either not addressed or only partly addressed by the collaborative EFH alternative.

B. Southern California Bight

The Southern California Bight region is exceptionally biologically and geologically diverse. Many offshore islands and banks create unique physical conditions that support a high abundance and diversity of biogenic habitats. Oceana strongly affirms support for designating this area, beyond the current bottom trawl footprint (seaward of approximately 100 to 120 fathoms from the mainland), as an EFH conservation area closed to bottom trawling (map 1, page 11).

The basis for this proposed area is to maintain a precautionary approach consistent with the Council’s approach in Amendment 19 of prohibiting trawling in un-trawled areas outside the existing trawl footprint. The area accounts for new data and information all indicating this region contains phenomenal biogenic and physical habitat diversity. Plus, the various banks off the Southern California Bight are highly valuable for recreational fishing. Protection from bottom trawling will ensure continued productive habitats for both recreational and fixed gear commercial fisheries.

Researchers have documented thousands of coral colonies and sponges here. There are over 3,300 coral observations, over 10,200 sponge observations, and over 5,600 pennatulid observations according to the NOAA Deep Sea Coral Database. Additionally, the recent discovery of the Del Mar Seep in the northern portion of the San Diego Trough (and included in this proposal area) has garnered significant scientific interest.

What is more, the area contains over 800 square miles of hard substrate as identified in the EFH Phase I Report. A significant portion of the area is predicted to be highly suitable coral habitat.<sup>17</sup> This closure fully encompasses the boundaries of the Channel Islands National Marine Sanctuary and would, thereby, increase the amount of Sanctuary area currently protected from bottom trawling.

Protecting this area would be consistent with NOAA's precautionary policy regarding deep-sea corals.<sup>18</sup> It would create a "study first" system in which areas where the industry seeks approval to trawl would have to be first studied and explored, and a determination made that bottom trawling would not adversely affect vulnerable habitats in the area. While a "feature-based" approach of protecting select known priority habitats may be appropriate in areas where bottom trawling occurs or in areas that have been fully mapped and explored, vast areas of unexplored habitat and the continued new discoveries of additional vibrant priority habitats in previously unexplored areas warrants a precautionary approach. In addition, the feature proposal that was offered for the Amendment 28 process misses many of the relevant features such as Sverdrup Bank, Butterfly Bank, Hancock Seamount and the Del Mar Seep (see map 1).

The boundaries of the Southern California Bight area in Alternative 1c were delineated based on discussions with the Southern California fishing industry and are intended to maintain current trawl tow areas in the four nearshore areas where halibut, sea cucumber, and ridgeback prawn trawling occur (see map 1). In federal waters, areas shallower than the following depths would remain open to trawling: 100 fathoms from Oceanside to Mexican Border; 100 fathoms at San Pedro Bay; 100 fathoms at Santa Monica Bay; and 120 fathoms from Hueneme Canyon to Pt. Conception.

III. In combination with adoption of EFH Alternative 1c, Oceana supports lifting the trawl Rockfish conservation area south of Pt. Chehalis, WA (Alternative 3b).

In the Amendment 28 process, the Council will consider a range of alternatives to open part or the entire coastwide trawl RCA from the California/ Mexico border to the southern extent of the Tribal U&As off Washington (Point Chehalis, WA). The core trawl RCA - a narrow depth-based ribbon from 100 to 150 fathoms and 100 to 200 fathoms in some areas - spans the West Coast EEZ from north to south and is closed year-round to bottom trawling. The first trawl RCA was implemented in 2002 to protect overfished darkblotched rockfish and it was subsequently expanded in 2003 to protect canary rockfish, Pacific ocean perch, lingcod, widow and yelloweye rockfish.

NOAA Strategic Plan for Deep-Sea Coral and Sponge Ecosystems: Research, Management, and International Cooperation. Silver Spring, MD: NOAA Coral Reef Conservation Program. NOAA Technical Memorandum CRCP 11. 67 pp.

While its primary purpose was to protect fish stocks from harvest, the core trawl RCA is serving as a habitat protection measure that, in combination with other conservation areas, reduces adverse impacts to EFH. The year-round trawl RCA contains sensitive and important habitat features including rocky reef habitat (a Habitat Area of Particular Concern), mixed rock habitat, corals, sponges and other biogenic habitat features that are currently outside EFH conservation areas. Having over a decade to recover from trawl impacts, habitats within the year-round trawl RCA provide valuable fish habitat and are more sensitive to the impacts of resumed trawling than similar areas that were not closed. As such, these sensitive components of EFH would be adversely impacted by resumed bottom trawling if the trawl RCA is opened.

In designing our 2013 coastwide conservation proposal we envisioned a scenario where the trawl RCA would eventually be fully lifted. Alternative 1c was explicitly designed to keep priority habitat features in the RCA closed as EFH conservation areas, thus ensuring that the habitat protection value of the RCA is maintained. Figure 4 shows that if the RCA is fully lifted South of Point Chehalis, WA (south of the Tribal U&As) and no new EFH conservation areas are designated, roughly 25% of the coastwide trawl RCA area will remain closed in current EFH conservation areas, in California state trawl closures that overlap the RCA, and in the RCA area north of Pt. Chehalis. Opening the RCA while adopting the collaborative EFH alternative 1b, would open over half of the hard substrate currently protected and it would open 60 percent of the yelloweye rockfish habitat in the current year-round RCA. Meanwhile the Oceana et al. EFH proposal (Alternative 1c) would keep 50% of the total RCA area closed as EFH, with 95% of the hard substrate in the RCA closed and 75% of the identified coral and sponge presence protected.

IV. Concerns with alternatives that would open EFH conservation areas or priority habitats within the year-round trawl RCA

The EFH alternatives under consideration would open portions of, or all of some EFH conservation areas, to bottom trawling. The current EFH conservation areas within the 700 fathom “footprint” were designed based on the presence of known priority habitat features and to help achieve the MSA’s requirement to minimize adverse fishing impacts to the extent practicable. Therefore, in the absence of new scientific information that contradicts the original basis for the designations, such openings are not warranted.

In certain specific cases (e.g., Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary), we support minor boundary modifications based on a thorough review of available information, coupled with the designation of additional EFH conservation areas in the immediate vicinity that provide an overall increase in habitat protection that can be demonstrated with analysis. However, we strongly caution against and oppose opening EFH conservation areas or year-round Trawl RCAs to bottom trawling where data shows priority habitat features are present. Very few EFH conservation areas have been fully mapped and surveyed and in most cases there is little to no new information to suggest that any current EFH conservation areas do not meet their original objectives to protect vulnerable and sensitive habitat features and minimize the adverse effects of fishing. In particular, we strongly oppose proposed re-openings in the collaborative EFH Alternative 1b at Grays Canyon, Bandon High Spot, Delgada Canyon, Point Arena and Cordell Bank (see maps 2, 9, 15, 17 and 20).

Opening existing EFH conservation areas and the trawl RCA will be certain to increase adverse fishing effects on EFH. Moreover, if it was practicable to protect these EFH conservation areas in 2006, it remains practicable today to keep these areas closed. As a matter of science, if any areas are considered for opening in the future, detailed surveys of the habitats and species are needed to ensure there are no vulnerable priority habitat features as well as a robust scientific assessment or study of fishing impacts.

Thank you for your ongoing commitment to minimizing the adverse effects of fishing on essential fish habitat, while providing for vibrant West Coast fishing opportunities. We look forward to working with NMFS and the Council as this process moves forward.

The feature proposal is not part of the collaborative alternative, but is a concept included in the Amendment 28 EFH-RCA process. Of particular note are the numerous key known features not included in the “feature” proposal including Hancock Seamount, the Del Mar Seep, Northern and Central Sverdrup Bank, Butterfly Bank, hundreds of documented corals and sponges (pink and yellow symbols), and expansive rocky reef habitat (brown polygons). Please see page 7 of this letter for a description of the Oceana et al. proposal area for the Southern California Bight. The boundaries of this site were defined primarily in response to the high levels of coral and sponge bycatch in the area while trying to avoid areas of relatively high trawl intensity immediately adjacent to the proposed site. Oceana dove on this site with an ROV in 2013 and documented and confirmed mixed reef habitat with boulders, cobble and sand, multiple rockfish species, sponge, gorgonian coral and soft coral.

Map 5. North Daisy Bank. New substrate maps made available as part of the Council’s EFH review show the presence of “mixed” reef habitat north of the existing Daisy Bank EFH conservation area. Dive surveys conducted by Oceana confirmed the presence of mixed reef seafloor habitat and showed that other sessile invertebrate species, including gorgonian corals and barrel sponges, are found on this bank. The area is located completely within the trawl RCA that would be lifted under some of the RCA alternatives.

In addition to gorgonian corals, black corals, and glass sponges, soft corals and Paragorgia sp. (“bubblegum coral”) have also been observed here. Researchers have found gas hydrate and methane seep carbonates in this region.<sup>19</sup> These unique biological and physical characteristics are important for maintaining diverse ecosystems within the oceans and deserve protection.

This area is essential to groundfish for feeding and breeding, and is also a hotspot for pelagic birds and marine mammals. The modifications here included two sites – Heceta Bank West and Heceta Bank to the east. Both sites are predominately located on the continental shelf at depths less than 200 m, however, the western area drops to roughly 500 m in one spot and both partially overlap sections of the trawl RCA. Heceta Bank West includes newly identified reef habitat mapped with high resolution sonar and the two sites combined include over 200 square miles of hard and mixed rocky reef. The area also includes 40 records of coral, sponge, and pennatulid observations including gorgonian corals, black coral, and glass sponge. In 2013 Oceana completed five ROV dives in the northern section of the Heceta Bank proposal area and confirmed the presence of large contiguous reef habitat, boulders, coral, sponge and other invertebrates, plus managed groundfish.

Map 9. Arago Reef and the Bandon High Spot. Significant new information on the Arago reef complex southwest of Coos Bay and west of Bandon, Oregon has been made available since 2005, including new seafloor substrate maps and ROV habitat surveys. In 2011 Oceana conducted eight dives to survey this reef habitat and found hundreds of widow rockfish, greenstriped rockfish, quillback rockfish, blue rockfish, tiger rockfish, rosy rockfish, olive/yellowtail rockfish, rex sole, kelp greenling, and lingcod.<sup>20</sup> In addition, this area appears to be important for canary rockfish and overfished yelloweye. Alternative 1c encompasses the entire reef feature while avoiding bottom trawl effort; however, the overlapping Alternative 1b - collaborative proposal area leaves open 40% of the reef habitat included in the Oceana proposed area.

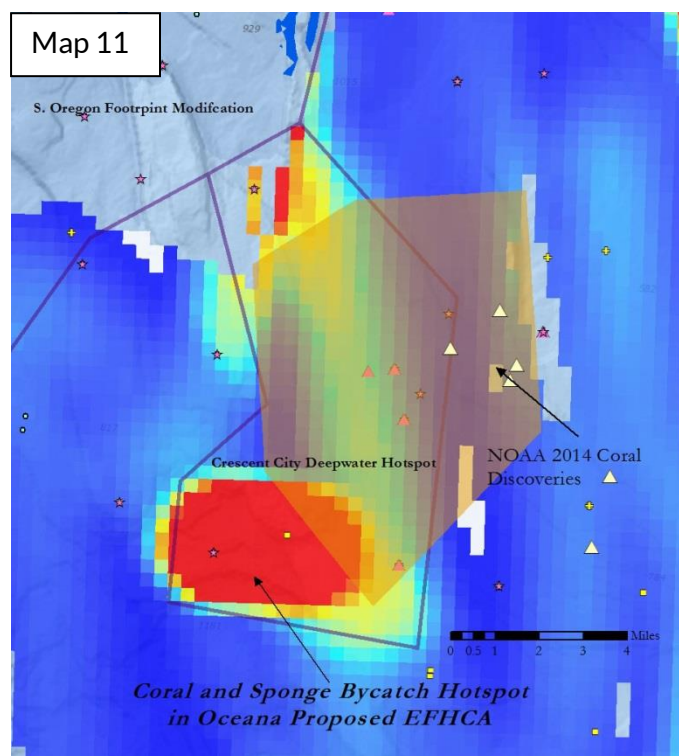

The collaborative proposal would also open documented rocky reef habitat and sponge habitat in the northern and southern ends of the Bandon High Spot EFH conservation area where the conservation area overlaps the current trawl RCA. In this map the Bandon High Spot EFH conservation area is outlined in blue so that the underlying hard and mixed substrate that the collaborative alternative would open can be seen.

Map 10. There is significant overlap between the collaborative proposal area and Oceana et al. proposal area at Rogue Canyon. However, the Oceana proposal area includes rocky reef habitat overlapping the Rogue Canyonhead and trawl RCA that is not in the collaborative proposal. To the south this map shows the Southern Oregon Footprint Modification and Crescent City Deepwater Hotspot that overlaps the collaborative proposed “Brush Patch.” The Southern Oregon footprint modification encompasses 37 observations of gorgonian corals, black corals, glass sponge, and pennatulids. Also included is an area of high predicted suitability for all coral taxa combined. This area of the upper slope spans a depth here range from 820 m at the shallowest point to 1,410 m, and includes areas of predicted rock habitat.

Map 11. Map 11 shows the coral and sponge bycatch hotspot in the Oceana proposed EFH conservation area that is not included in the collaborative proposed Brush Patch proposal area. Both areas focus on an area known to contain relatively high coral bycatch. The NOAA Deep Sea Coral Research and Technology Program looked at this coral and sponge bycatch data and recommended the Council consider EFH conservation areas for select locations where there was disproportionately high coral bycatch. See page 46 in the NOAA 2014 Report to Congress. As described in the NOAA 2014 report, this includes “standardized coral bycatch (weight/km) in the top 1 percentile of all coral bycatch coast-wide reported from commercial trawl fisheries, based on data from the West Coast Groundfish Observer Program.” The four triangles area NOAA 2014 dive locations where researchers documented a total of 12,831 corals comprising at least 13 different taxa (including two species of black coral and “peppermint” coral) plus 629 sponges.<sup>21</sup> Given the coral and sponge bycatch, observations and fishermen knowledge all converging on overlapping and adjacent locations, we recommend adopting both the collaborative and Oceana proposed sites at the Crescent City Deepwater Hotspot/ Brush Patch.

Map 12. Showing the Samoa Deepwater, Samoa Reef and the proposed Eel River EFH conservation areas in the Oceana and collaborative proposals. Two rocky reef sites in the southwest corner of the Samoa Deepwater proposal area were surveyed by the Monterey Bay Aquarium Research Institute. In total, these surveys yielded 2,071 individual coral observations according to data contained in the NOAA Deep Sea Coral Research Technology Program deep sea coral and sponge database.

Map 13. North Eel River Canyon is a proposed expansion of the existing Eel River Canyon EFH conservation area. Included here are records of gorgonian corals and glass sponges. This area was identified primarily to encompass a major sponge bycatch hotspot and was identified in the NOAA 2014 Report to Congress as being among the areas in the top one percentile of all observed coral bycatch coastwide (page 46, NOAA 2014 report to Congress). The collaborative proposal would protect adjacent and overlapping sites to the east and west but not the bycatch hotspot area.

Map 14. Towed cameras deployed by NOAA scientists in 2014 documented that the survey area inside our Mendocino Ridge proposal area was 97% hard substrate of relatively high relief at depths between 631 and 798 meters.<sup>22</sup> They also documented over 10,000 coral colonies during their 2014 research there (see dive locations on map). Soft corals were found at shallower depths as well as gorgonians including bubblegum corals and sea fans. These areas are not included the collaborative proposal area at Mendocino Ridge that is contained within the Oceana proposal area.

Map 15. The original designation of the Delgada Canyon EFH conservation area was a critical component of the Amendment 19 action to protect known priority habitats in this region off Northern California. This was the result of thorough and deliberate consideration by the Council and the State of California. Fishery managers recognized this action was necessary to prevent adverse impacts to EFH even in light of the known importance of this area as a fishing ground and to promote recovery of this area. The collaborative alternative would open the entire EFH conservation area and overlapping trawl RCA outside of state waters. However, doing so would cause adverse impacts to sensitive habitats that have been protected from trawling since 2006. In the interest of being responsive to industry request, and after careful consideration, we proposed reopening as much of the area on the shelf as possible while maintaining the most sensitive areas of the canyon closed. The area that would be reopened in the Oceana alternative is still very important and productive habitat for groundfish and includes some high predicted coral habitat, isolated patches of hard substrate, and the northern canyon edge. In contrast to the opening in the collaborative alternative, the trawl RCA and deeper depths of the existing Delgada Canyon EFH conservation area would not be affected by this reopening. As with all other proposed reopening areas, our support for this reopening in the Oceana alternative is contingent on the adoption of the closure components of this proposal as a regional package.

Map 16. Noyo Canyonhead.

Encompassing the trawl RCA portion of Noyo Canyon and its canyonhead, this site contains multiple coral and sponge records from Monterey Bay Aquarium Research Institute, including the bubble gum coral Paragorgia spp., and it is high predicted coral habitat. While this general area is an important fishing ground close to Ft. Bragg, California, most of the proposal area is currently part of the trawl RCA and the area includes virtually no recent trawl effort. Due to the targeted nature of this closure, there will still be opportunities for continuous trawl tows along the canyon edges.

Maps 17 and 18. Both the collaborative (map 17) and Oceana et al. alternatives (map 18) propose opening large portions of Point Arena Biogenic EFHCA for the primary purpose of restoring a bottom trawl tow. The Point Arena Biogenic EFH conservation area is inside the Greater Farallones National Marine Sanctuary. The Oceana et al. alternative for this area includes the adjacent proposed Saunders Reef EFH conservation area, which we proposed for the explicit purpose of maintaining equivalent coverage of soft substrate while accommodating fishing opportunities. A substantial area of trawl grounds that were closed in 2006 would be reopened in soft sediment shelf habitat in the 60-100 fathom (about 110-180 m) depth range (roughly 42 mi<sup>2</sup>) in the Oceana et al. alternative. This proposed reopening is based on a specific geographic request from the fishing industry to resume trawling in this area, and our proposal for reopening this area is contingent on the designation of additional closures in this region (i.e. Saunders Reef and Pt. Arena Biogenic South Expansion) designed to compensate for any potential adverse impacts to EFH associated with this reopening. This reopening includes some sponge and pennatulid records and is among the major EFH protections in Northern California. It is, therefore, essential to mitigate impacts to protected habitat from this reopening through the protection of additional and commensurate proposed closures. In contrast the collaborative alternative (Map 16) would open roughly 75 mi<sup>2</sup> of the existing EFH conservation area but only add 12.2 mi<sup>2</sup> in new protections. With opening the trawl RCA as well, the collaborative proposal results in a net loss in total area protected in the Greater Farallones National Marine Sanctuary. Absent a commensurate increase in protection of similar habitat types such as that in the Oceana et al. alternative, we oppose any reopening of the Point Arena Biogenic EFHCA, as there is no data to support removing habitat protections in a conservation area designed to protect biogenic habitats that has been allowed to recover for over a decade.

Map 19. Russian River, aka “The Football”.

The 20 square mile Russian River site is a new proposed EFH conservation area fully within the trawl RCA. The area, known locally as “The Football,” is a large rocky bank approximately 180 to 280 meters deep. Recent NOAA ROV surveys documented 22 coral colonies including eight colonies of a newly identified gorgonian coral species (Swiftia farallonesica).<sup>23</sup> NOAA also discovered a cat shark nursery with hundreds of egg casings. While the EFH data catalog does not show rocky habitat here, recent habitat mapping and underwater surveys confirmed extensive hard substrate of both high and low relief throughout the football area. Input from fishermen suggests that this area is highly productive for many groundfish species and this was confirmed by NOAA researchers who documented 16 species of Sebastes, plus flatfishes, lingcod and others. The 2.2 square mile collaborative proposal area is contained within the Oceana et al. proposal area and includes some of the documented coral habitat, but misses key features of the area including Swiftia coral colonies, a rocky reef area called “the ledge” containing diverse corals and rockfish, and cat shark and skate nursery habitat.

Map 20. Gobbler’s Knob and Cordell Bank.

Combined with opening the trawl RCA, the collaborative proposal is a net loss for habitat protection in the Cordell Bank National Marine Sanctuary (Figure 5, below). In this area we strongly oppose the collaborative proposed reopening of the Cordell Bank EFH conservation area. This area is a soft sediment area known to contain vast fields of biogenic habitats. There is no scientific basis for reopening this area; in fact the scientific information indicates this area would be adversely impacted by resumed bottom trawling in this area. We also oppose the reopening of the RCA at the newly identified hard and mixed substrate surrounding Cordell Bank and Gobbler’s Knob. We support our proposed EFH conservation area modifications that add to the protection of hard and mixed substrate, coral habitat and overfished yelloweye rockfish habitat when also removing the trawl RCA.

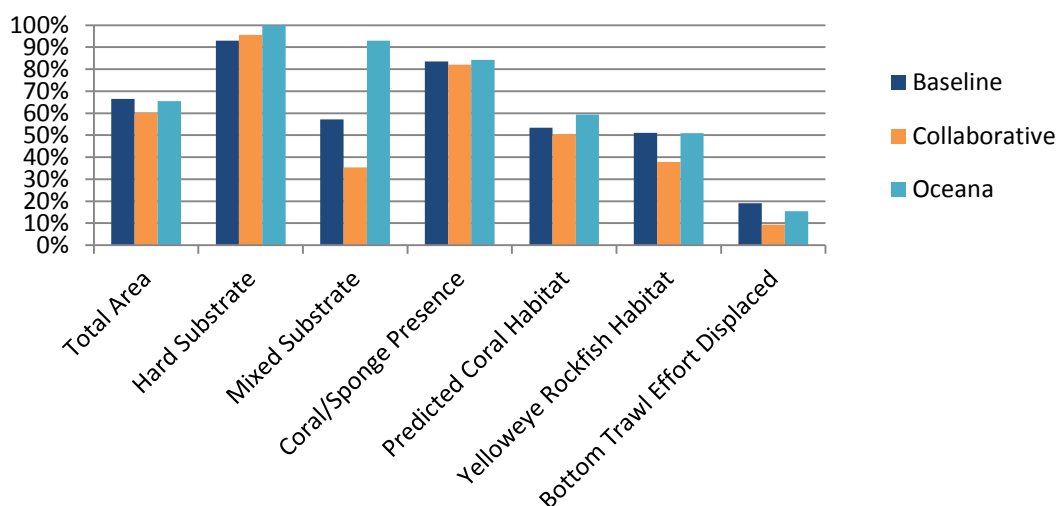

We also oppose the reopening of the RCA at the newly identified hard and mixed substrate surrounding Cordell Bank and Gobbler’s Knob. We support our proposed EFH conservation area modifications that add to the protection of hard and mixed substrate, coral habitat and overfished yelloweye rockfish habitat when also removing the trawl RCA.

The Oceana et al. proposed Cordell Bank expansion includes over 2,400 observations of at least six deep sea coral species and over 60 observations of sponges.<sup>24</sup> The proposed modification to the southeast of the Cordell Bank EFH conservation area encompasses an area that local knowledge suggests contains significant trawl hangs and high risk of interaction with overfished species. In addition, the Oceana alternative includes a site on the western slope of Cordell Bank with newly discovered rocky reef and deep sea coral records that are likely indicative of a more widespread distribution of priority habitats throughout this depth range, thus justifying a larger “buffer” around Cordell Bank.

Map 21. The collaborative proposal for the Morro Bay region would significantly increase bottom trawl fishing opportunity with the opening the trawl RCA. However, it does not simultaneously protect priority hard rocky reef habitat at East Santa Lucia Bank or coral and sponge areas that overlap the trawl RCA as included in the Oceana et al. alternative. The East Santa Lucia Bank proposal areas would protect a significant amount of hard substrate that is currently open to trawling. According to NMFS trawl surveys, the area on the Bank contains multiple coral records and several distinct areas with glass sponges. There is little current information on trawl effort in this area due to the extremely low fishing effort throughout this region in recent years.

Oceana alternative 1c also includes a new EFH conservation area at Pt. Arguello, containing numerous biogenic habitat records and is indicated as a hotspot for cowcod and bocaccio rockfish in Alternative 3c as developed by the Project Team.

Conservation group Oceana tracks deep sea corals off the California Coast

Beneath the waves, flame-colored rockfish slipped past coral fans, brittle stars lay in wait for prey, and anemones swayed with the current.

It's a scene often featured in photo spreads of tropical atolls and islets, but these coral gardens are in the chilly waters off California's Channel Islands, hundreds of meters below the surface. Until recently, no one had seen them.

Last week, the marine nonprofit Oceana launched a five-day expedition to document the undersea garden, using a remotely operated vehicle to film habitat too deep for divers to reach. It's part of the group's effort to secure new protection for a large swath of West Coast waters. And it's a step into the unknown in our own backyard.

"We're going to be astronauts today," said Geoff Shester, Oceana's California program director, as the crew embarked for the Channel Islands on the NOAA research vessel, the R/V Shearwater. "We're going to be pioneers of a place that has 10 million people living around it, but nobody knows anything about."

Only a small fraction of the sea floor is mapped, and scientists have just begun to take stock of its deep water habitat, and the delicate sponges, corals, rockfish and eels that live there. Efforts to understand it have shown far more life on the sea bottom than scientists expected.

"Although fishermen had been picking up deep sea corals in their nets, and early scientists had collected these, there really wasn't an appreciation for the rich habitat they create," said Thomas Hourigan, chief scientist for the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration's deep sea coral research and technology program. "And like shallow water coral, these deep sea corals are hot spots of biodiversity, providing habitat for invertebrate and fish species."

On the final day of the expedition last week, the Oceana crew headed for a spot between Santa Cruz and Santa Rosa Island. They were joined by Alexandra Cousteau, granddaughter of the renowned ocean explorer, and by Austin Stowell, an actor in the Dolphin Tale films, who signed on to help Oceana. As crew members they shared duties ranging from operating equipment to tidying the galley. Cousteau, a senior advisor to Oceana, said she feels an urgent need to safeguard the ocean.

"The oceans are very different today than they were in my grandfather's day," she said. "They are so overfished, we've got climate change and ocean acidification, and oil and gas (drilling.) We've got to protect what we have...This is our life support system."

As the ship powered out to the islands, scores of marine animals appeared; flocks of seabirds hovered over a ball of baitfish, and common dolphins raced in the ship's wake.

Near Santa Cruz Island, the Shearwater made a stop at Painted Cave, one of the world's largest sea caves. A quarter-mile deep and big enough for a ship to sail through, its 160-foot entrance revealed rock arches encrusted with red and green lichen.

The geologic marvel above the water hinted at features below it. Although much of the sea floor around the globe is bare, sandy bottom, the sea floor off Southern California is pleated with rocky folds and ridges that harbor unique sea life.

"Already we've found amazing, bizarre phenomena," Shester said.

On the ROV monitor, an olive yellowtail swam by, and a slew of ling cod, along with a hot pink rosy rockfish, and vermillion rockfish. There are over 100 species of rockfish, many of which congregate on the ocean bottom.

"They're the dominant fish species in this ecosystem on the sea floor," Shester said. "This is their grocery store. This is their home."

Rockfish are prized for their sweet, mild flavor, and are popular catch in Southern California. They're among the longest-living fishes; one species may live 200 years, according to the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

Their longevity, low birth rates and late reproductive age leaves them vulnerable to overfishing. So researchers are eager to identify the nursery areas needed to replenish the fishery. They think these sea bottoms, with their rocky crevices and complex coral gardens, provide the cover the young fish need.

Throughout the week, the expedition documented "Christmas Tree corals," their dark branches covered in living ornaments of crabs, sea stars, barnacles and shark egg cases. Gold corals shone pale yellow under the ROV headlights. Researchers found red and purple sea fans and bright pink bubblegum coral.

Some are among the oldest organisms on the planet; single coral colonies have been dated at over 4,000 years old. Unlike their tropical counterparts, these grow slowly in cold depths below the reach of sunlight.

"So if these deep water corals are damaged, they can take decades, or hundreds of years to recover, if they recover at all," Hourigan said.

That's what Oceana hopes to head off with its proposal to the Pacific Fishery Management Council. In November the council, which manages U.S. fisheries from the edge of state waters to 200 nautical miles offshore, is updating its essential fish habitat for west coast groundfish, including rockfish and other species.

Oceana is asking the council to place a swath of ocean from Northern California to the Mexican border off limits to bottom trawling, a fishing method that involved dragging a large net along the sea floor to catch target fish. In the process, however, it can also pull up corals and other organisms.

Beto Alvarez

Most of the area that Oceana proposes to shut isn't currently used for trawling, but the organization is calling for precautionary closures while researchers investigate it. Once they explore it, they say, scientists can sort out the most abundant areas from those without key habitat.

David Crabbe, a member of the fishery council and commercial squid fisherman, said commercial fishermen would be more comfortable with the plan if there's a specific mechanism to free up areas for fishing in the future.

"If they have a plan to reopen trawl grounds, that would give fishermen confidence that if impacts are shown to be minimal, that there's a pathway to reopen it," he said.

Shester said Oceana is okay with future fishing in less sensitive areas, but he argued that preserving biological hotspots supports both conservation and fisheries.

"If we can protect this habitat, that will protect the ocean, but also feed the world," he said.

RE: Agenda Item F.4.c. Groundfish EFH and RCA Amendment 28 Alternatives

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members,

Please accept these comments on behalf of Midwater Trawlers Cooperative (MTC). MTC represents 23 trawl catcher-vessels. On the west coast MTC members participate in the at-sea and shoreside whiting sectors as well as the traditional bottom trawl Groundfish fishery. We have been actively engaged in the EFH review and RCA adjustment discussions over the last several years and we offer the following comments on both issues, including our own proposal for new EFH closed areas off of central Oregon. Because the MTC EFH proposal is encompassed within the proposals currently analyzed (and is actually just a modification of the areas forwarded to the analysts by the Collaborative as a placeholder), we believe that it can be selected as a Preliminary Preferred Alternative (PPA) at this meeting for the mid-coast Oregon region.

We address the EFH issue first and then the RCA issue second.

ESSENTIAL FISH HABITAT

General

The Magnuson Act (MSA) requires that Fishery Management Plans (FMPs) “describe and identify essential fish habitat (EFH)” as well as “minimize to the extent practicable adverse effects on such habitat caused by fishing and encourage other actions to encourage the conservation and enhancement of such habitat.”

At the same time that Councils identify and protect EFH, the MSA also requires that fishery management decisions not only take into consideration but also meet the competing ten National Standards. This results in a delicate balancing act to protect fish populations, ocean habitat that supports sustainable fish populations, harvesting and processing businesses, secondary and tertiary support businesses and the coastal communities (and broader nation) that rely on commercial fishing for not only economic benefits but for access to a healthy food source as well.

The bottom line is that EFH protections do not occur in a vacuum. They are mandated to the extent practicable based on the best scientific information available while taking into consideration ALL other management measures that provide the ancillary benefit of protecting EFH even though that may not be their primary objective.

Collaborative Process

Newport area fishermen agreed to meet with the Collaborative group at the outset of the process. After a relatively rocky start we did have some productive meetings with the Collaborative over the last 18 months. In the Spring of 2016 these meetings culminated in a proposal for the central coast, which unfortunately was prematurely forwarded to the Plan Team for analysis before there was consensus from impacted fishermen. The primary sticking point was what the Collaborative captured in the Heceta Bank area. It was a somewhat whittled down version of the original Oceana proposal and in the minds of Newport-area fishermen, it was still much too expansive, particularly the increases along the western edge. MTC submitted a counter-proposal the first week of April directly to the Collaborative that had broad support from the impacted industry. The counter-proposal was rejected by the Collaborative following a face-to-face meeting during the April 2016 Council meeting.

We are disappointed that the collaborative rejected what we believe is a fair proposal. However, we do not intend that our comments here undermine the Collaborative's successful efforts in other areas of the coast where they were able to reach agreement.

MTC Central Oregon Coast Proposal

Attachment 1 is the MTC Central Oregon Coast proposal that includes new EFH closures as well as modest partial reopenings of currently closed areas. It is a modified version of the proposal that the Collaborative mistakenly forwarded to the analysts, which is examined in the appendices of Agenda Item F.4.a. Project Team Report. This is the exact counter-proposal that MTC submitted to the Collaborative last Spring which was subsequently rejected by that group.

The MTC proposal:

- Is informed by multiple decades of trawl fishing experience and the practical knowledge that results from literally hundreds of years of combined time on the ocean
- Is informed by new scientific and anecdotal information from a variety of sources
- Takes into consideration the future generations of fishermen who will make their living off the Oregon coast (many are the sons and daughters of MTC vessel owners who are already skippering the boats)
- Takes into consideration the current health and sustainability of Groundfish stocks
- Considers improved fishing technologies, gear modifications, and more exact fishing strategies
- Acknowledges that overfished stocks have either rebuilt or are rebuilding at much quicker rates than previously anticipated (suggesting that existing management measures and EFH closed areas may be sufficient)
- Acknowledges that there are important priority habitats that may need additional protection
- Includes areas that expand EFH closed area protection from what is currently in place
- More closely reflects the stated purpose and need for EFH protections in the Groundfish FMP and under the Magnuson Stevens Act
- Protects habitat that federally managed Groundfish populations utilize throughout their life cycle
- Recognizes the many other management actions have the ancillary benefit of protecting EFH even though that may not be their primary objective (i.e. the trawl rationalization program)

- Goes above and beyond what the Groundfish Advisory Panel (whose membership includes two Collaborative leaders) recommended in terms of increases in priority habitat over net increases in EFH closed areas (Agenda Item H.8.a Supplemental GAP Report September 2015), and
- Is a fair approach to protecting EFH off the central coast to the extent practicable while balancing the needs of the fishing industry and coastal communities as well as maximizing the net benefit to the nation from these important natural resources.

Specific to the counter-proposal we offer the following rationale/ justification:

SOUTH OF THE RIVER:

1) Nehalem Bank / Shale Pile: We made only a slight change to the Collaborative proposal on the northeast side to bring in the boundary line a little so that vessels towing along that edge do not accidentally get too close to the line and get a violation for drifting into the line during haul back and Enforcement does not have a hard time distinguishing if a vessel touched the line. This line change should not affect habitat protection as it would not change the expected tow routes themselves.

2) Popcorn: No change to Collaborative proposal ; it is OK.

3) Garibaldi Reef: There is a modified blue box to tighten up the area in the west of Collaborative proposed area that protects rough ground. This area contains productive shrimping grounds and our proposal reflects the intent of shrimp fishermen to maintain their tows while protecting the habitat priority that needs protecting.

NEWPORT REGION:

4) Stonewall Bank: Very small change on northern side to account for historical summer tows.

5) Daisy Bank / Nelson Island: We shrank the west, south, and east boundaries; but we expanded the northern boundary. The most important boundary to shrink is the western boundary, where just changing that boundary to somewhere around the 150 fathom line would open up muddy trawlable grounds. This is an area that we anticipated further negotiation, with a shrinking western boundary coupled with an expanding central northern boundary an obvious trade-off. We realized shrinking the eastern boundary might be a difficult negotiation, but we saw that as a similar collaborative process that had occurred in other areas on the coast where open areas were closed and closed areas were open, especially when done for a net closure increase and an increase in high relief area closures. Yet ultimately, we saw flexibility in our stance on this eastern boundary and this area is not in our view what lead to the impasse with the collaborative group. Hecata Bank area is what lead to the impasse.

6) Heceta Bank: Our willingness to add closed areas to the southern, eastern, and northern sides of the existing Hecata bank closure that is already the most significant closure of historical trawl grounds north of 40-10 showed that we were serious about our efforts with the Collaborative. We added a closed area on the northern part of the east side of Heceta Bank. We reduced / eliminated proposed expansions on the west side of Heceta Bank, and we reclaimed a small portion of the west side of Hecata Bank. Overall, there is still a significant expansion of Heceta Bank EFH closed area compared to the current configuration.

The impasse with the collaborative group was largely due to our desire not to give up large areas on the western side of Heceta Bank for the following reasons:

- That area is already protected by the amendment 19 “mandatory EFH protection measure” of maximum 8 inch footrope inside 100 fathom line
- There are muddy trawlable areas throughout this area, and closing them because of a few areas of high relief hard / mixed substrate that are rendered inaccessible by the eight inch footrope does not seem logical; even closing just the few areas of high relief would cut other tows short because set and haul process cannot occur in closed areas
- Even though hard and mixed substrate exists outside of current closed areas, the April 2013 EFH synthesis report showed less than 4% of bottom trawl effort occurs in hard or mixed substrate areas.
- We were willing to give up grounds closer to shore in higher relief in keeping with best available science on species life cycle habits, such as juvenile rockfish settling in relatively shallow water and eventually moving to deeper waters
- There was general agreement that we were already giving up significant grounds in contrary to all evidence that net increases in closures were not necessary given species stock health status and trajectory, existing fishery management provisions impacting fleet behavior (not just closed areas), potential unintended consequences of excessive amounts of closed areas, and regulatory guidelines

Impacted fishermen have dedicated a lot of time and energy to developing the counter-proposal. We agreed to additional closures like the new “Popcorn” closure as well as in other areas as a trade-off for more latitude with the Heceta Bank alterations. We believe that overall our propoosal expands the protection for priority habitats while eliminating some of the unnecessary protections that currently exist. Our proposal reflects a net increase in protection for priority habitats, a stated goal of the Council. It also considers the historical, current and future trawl effort in these important areas and aims to support a robust Groundfish trawl industry now and into the future.

ROCKFISH CONSERVATION AREA (RCA) ADJUSTMENTS

MTC members support Alternative 2: Remove the entire Trawl RCA. The RCA’s were a blunt management tool used by the Council to protect against large catches of overfished rockfish species prior to the implementation of the Trawl Individual Quota Program. Attainment of Groundfish annual catch limits in the ITQ program is woefully low and harvesters need access to the RCA to have a reasonable expectation of achieving Optimum Yield.

Rationalization offered a way for harvesters to move away from trip limit management (use it or lose it), increase their operational flexibility and extract more value out of the groundfish fishery while simultaneously taking personal responsibility for all the fish that they caught. Personal responsibility (and the associated regulation that requires quota pound coverage for all species caught) has become the primary incentive to reduce unwanted bycatch. After the ITQ program was implemented, fishermen found themselves personally accountable for their catch but also found themselves still hampered by regulations in place from the pre-ITQ management regime. These regulations, one of which is the trawl RCA, have prevented fishermen from realizing increased attainment of annual catch limits for economically important groundfish species which means that their businesses, seafood processors and coastal communities are not realizing the increased value that should be afforded to them through the ITQ program.

We believe that this action is justified for several reasons, not the least of which is the fundamentally different management program which now governs the west coast trawl groundfish fishery. The individual accountability afforded by the trawl ITQ program has proven that fishing behavior can and does change when harvesters are held personally responsible for their catch.

The current analysis indicates that the majority of area contained within the RCA is soft or muddy bottom, not priority habitat. Some of the existing EFH closed areas are within the RCA grounds and that is the tool to protect priority habitats.

Conclusion

MTC members recommend the Council support a PPA for the central Oregon coast that reflects the counter-proposal offered with this comment letter as Attachment 1. It expands the priority habitat protections at the same time that it considers historic, current and future trawl effort as well as a robust Groundfish trawl fishery. Additionally, MTC members support Alternative 2 to remove the trawl RCA in its entirety.

This is an overview of the region off Newport. The strip of area between the green dashed lines running north-south is the Trawl RCA, which would be opened. The red dashed lines mark areas that would be closed to bottom trawling as EFH. The green dashed line on the south of Stonewall Bank would be a re-opening of the existing Stonewall Bank EFH area (with the red dashed lines marking extensions of the Stonewall Bank EFH area to the north and west).

This is a close-up of the Stonewall Bank reconfiguration. The north extension and the west extension would adjoin each other. They're marked separately here because the ideas came up in two different discussions. The southern re-opening is all soft sediment. The north is mostly rough bottom, and the west has some hard bottom as well.

This is an overview of the region south of the Columbia River. The strip of area between the green dashed lines running north-south is the Trawl RCA, which would be opened. The red dashed lines mark areas that would be closed to bottom trawling as EFH. There are two areas over Garibaldi Reef – one on the northern end and one on the southern end. There is also an adjustment to the existing Shale Pile EFH area, which would trim off the northeastern edge and add a small bit on the southeastern side. Finally, there is a deep area off Astoria Canyon that was discussed in the earlier draft package (not a new idea).

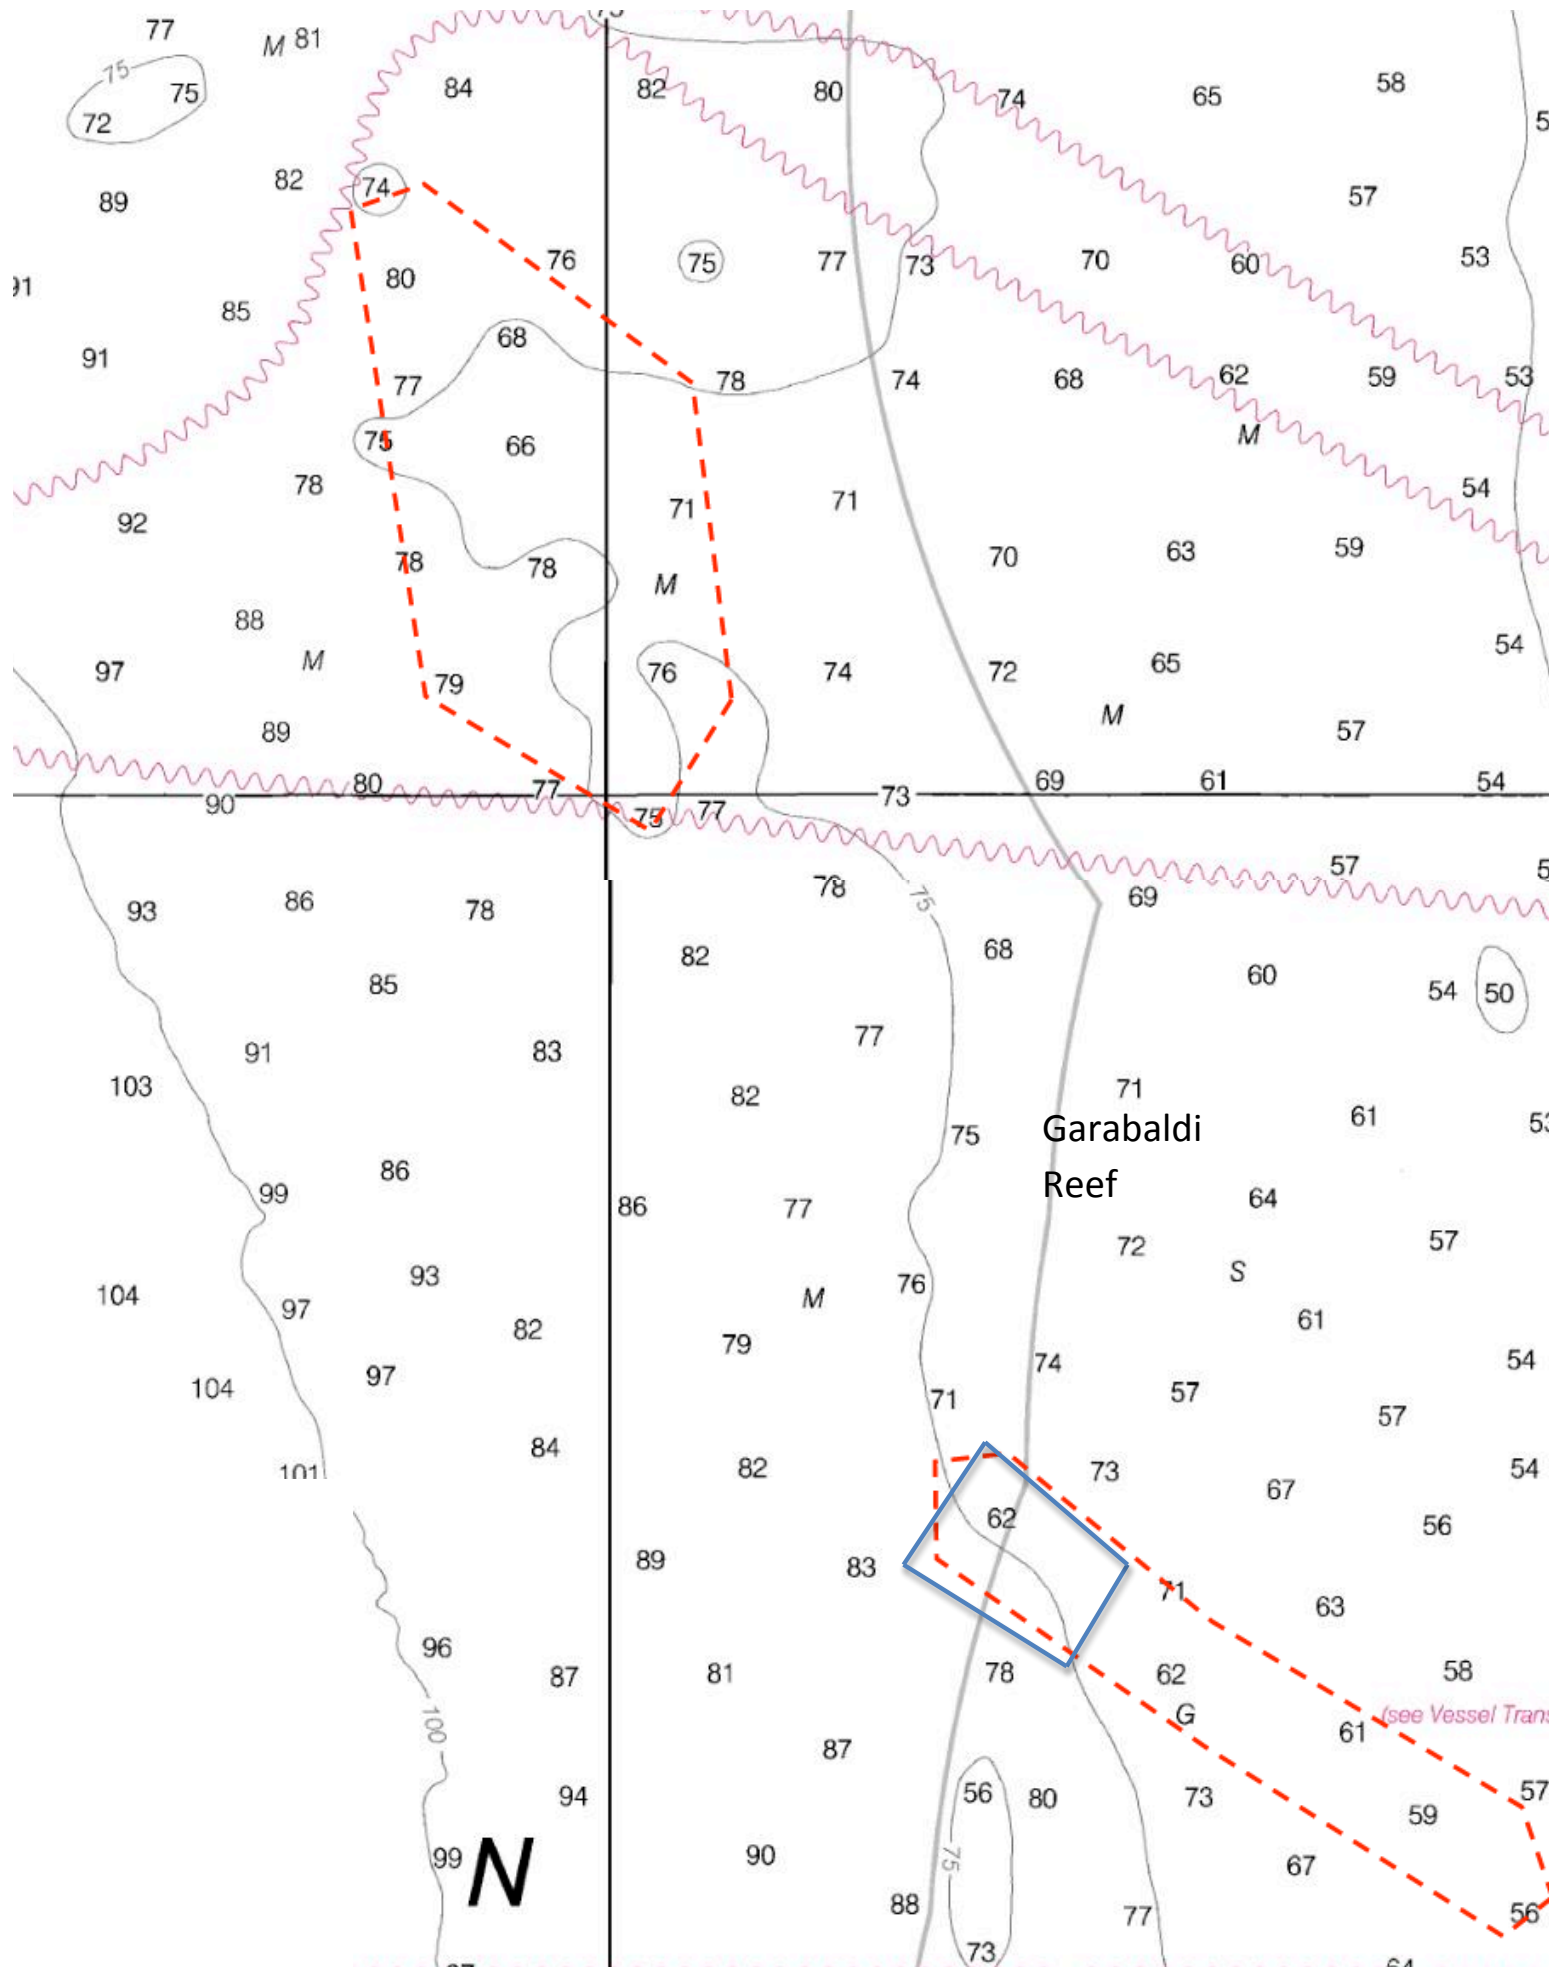

On the next pages the changes to the existing Shale Pile EFH area and the potential Garibaldi Reef areas are shown in more detail.

This is a nautical chart showing the existing Shale Pile EFH, with the area proposed for opening shown by green dashed lines, and the area proposed for adding to the closure shown by red dashed lines.

RE: Agenda Item F.4 (Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat (EFH) and Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) Amendment)

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members,

We write in support of the Pacific Fishery Management Council's (Council) ongoing efforts to comprehensively address and improve habitat protections and consider revisions to longstanding mortality closures in the fishery through Amendment 28 (Am 28) to the Groundfish Fishery Management Plan (FMP).

We request that the Council continue to move Am 28 forward through the identification of Preliminary Preferred Alternatives (PPA) addressing bottom trawl Essential Fish Habitat Conservation Area (EFHCA) and Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) modifications, as detailed in the following pages and summarized as follows:

- Identify a PPA shoreward of 700 fathoms depth that will create new or expanded bottom trawl EFHCA's of sufficient size, quality, diversity, and geographical distribution to ensure a net increase in effective protections for benthic habitat, when balanced against any re-openings of existing EFHCA's or the RCA.
- Ensure that the PPA includes the Comprehensive Conservation Proposal (Oceana et. al. 2013) alternative for the area south of Point Conception, California. This alternative will create a new EFHCA closed to bottom trawling for any areas in the Southern California Bight that are not subject to trawl effort now.
- Include new EFHCA's in the PPA that protect the following priority habitats from adverse impacts of fishing gear:
  - Areas that have not been fished recently or have never been fished;
  - Biogenic habitat such as corals and sponges;
  - Chemosynthetic ecosystems (hydrocarbon seeps);
  - A diverse array of habitats relative to substrate type, biogeographic province, and depth zones;
  - Large habitat closures forming a "corridor" (connecting shelf to upper slope to lower slope).
- Provided sensitive habitats within the RCA are identified and incorporated into new EFHCA's, and that all other impacts including impacts to protected species are addressed, adopt RCA Alternative 3d to remove the current coastwide RCA and replace it with a flexible system of block closures that the Council can deploy as needed to address high catch of any species of concern.

- Ensure that the cumulative impacts of Am 28 and several other inter-related Council actions (Salmon ESA Consultation, Trawl gear Regulation Changes, etc.) are comprehensively analyzed and addressed
- Apply the core tenets of EFH identification and protection and Ecosystem-Based Fishery Management (EBFM) to guide analysis and selection of the PPA.

The PPA should achieve a net effective gain in habitat protection

We request that the Council identify a PPA shoreward of 700 fathoms depth that will create new or expanded bottom trawl EFHCA's of sufficient size, quality, diversity, and geographical distribution to ensure a net increase in effective protections for benthic habitat, when balanced against any re-openings of existing EFHCA's or the RCA. An overall improvement and increase in habitat protection is consistent with provisions of the MSA that call for the conservation and enhancement of EFH.<sup>1</sup> As such, it is not enough to simply prevent further degradation. Fishery managers should strive to enhance the amount and quality of EFH and restore previously damaged habitats.

In support of this objective, the Council should first consider two key procedural and methodological factors. The Council should a) articulate a clear linkage between all EFHCA and RCA modifications in the PPA, such that a comprehensive analysis of the net effects can be included in the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS), and b) articulate a clear definition for a net effective gain.

In our view, this definition has two key components. The first is the starting point: net effective gain means improvement relative to a baseline (status quo) that includes all current areas that are effectively protected from trawl impacts, regardless of the regulatory source of that protection. Most critically, this includes areas inside the RCA that are outside the footprint of the shrimp fishery. It also includes any re-openings of areas that are within a current EFHCA. Areas currently under effective protection that are re-opened should be balanced against new, durable protections (new or expanded EFHCA's) to produce an overall net gain relative to this interpretation of status quo.

The second is the ecological criteria that should be met to conclude that the PPA is in fact a net gain for benthic habitat. We suggest that the following should be the factors considered:

1. Area: The total area (square mileage) under effective protection is important to consider. The Council should strive to ensure that the area protected from trawl impacts within the existing fishery footprint (i.e., inside 700 fathoms) increases under the PPA.
2. Quality: Protections for priority habitats such as hard substrate and structure-forming invertebrates (corals and sponges) should be key criteria, and a net increase in these protections should be a key objective of the PPA. We note that the Council's Habitat Committee recommended, in April 2016, that the Council should "Assure the net gain in the protection of EFH priority habitats through Amendment 28."<sup>2</sup>

3. Diversity: The PPA should include expanded protections for a diverse and representative array of habitat types. For example, while hard and mixed substrate are of primary importance due to its vulnerability and unique importance to groundfish and corals, the PPA should also seek to protect other important ecosystem components like soft-bottom habitats (which often harbor lesser-known corals like pennatulidae).
4. Geographic Distribution: A net increase in effective protections, as measured by the three broad criteria listed above, should be the outcome of the PPA on a coastwide basis, but also within any given biogeographic (i.e., latitudinal) region or depth zone. The Council's Habitat Committee also addressed this issue in its April 2016 report, recommending that Am 28 "Protect a diverse array of habitat types across latitude ranges and within biogeographic zones that occur in the project area."<sup>3</sup>

There are two remaining comprehensive (coastwide or near coastwide, excluding the Tribal Usual and Accustomed Areas) alternatives based on public proposals:

1. Alternative 1.b: the Industry/Non-Governmental Organization Collaborative Working Group (Industry-NGO Collaborative), as amended by the proponents in April 2016<sup>4</sup> and June 2016<sup>5</sup>
2. Alternative 1.c: the Comprehensive Conservation Proposal (Oceana et. al.), as amended in September 2015<sup>6</sup>, April 2016<sup>7</sup>, and June 2016<sup>8</sup>

We offer the following brief remarks on these two alternatives, with additional detail to follow as we refine and complete our analyses on how these packages perform relative to a net effective gain and the criteria described above:

The Oceana et al. alternative overall scores well on both habitat protection and practicability.<sup>9</sup> We do have concerns however, based on our preliminary analysis, that the Industry-NGO

Collaborative alternative does not achieve a net effective gain in habitat protection. Specifically, this alternative would actually result in a loss of protections for certain key priority habitats in some regions of the coast, as well as a loss of total protected area. The new report from the Amendment 28 Project Team confirms these conclusions. The synthesis analysis, which incorporates RCA changes and thus best describes net impacts, indicates that both alternatives are practicable (with net increases in fishing opportunity), that Alternative 1.c (Oceana et al.) would increase net habitat protections, and Alternative 1.b (Industry-NGO Collaborative) would reduce protections for hard substrate, mixed substrate, and canyons/gullies.<sup>10</sup> In addition, the Industry-NGO Collaborative alternative proposes partial re-openings of a number of existing EFHCA's, an action that must meet a very high standard. New information from the EFH Data Catalog demonstrating that sensitive or priority habitats will not suffer adverse effects from the re-introduction of trawling must support selection of EFHCA re-openings as part of the PPA. Examples of such information should include the absence of significant areas of hard or mixed substrate, absence of biogenic habitat, etc.

Both proposals contain discrete closure and re-opening possibilities that may prove viable and valuable as part of a comprehensive final outcome. As detailed later in this letter, we are in full support of the Oceana et al. option for the area south of Point Conception, California. Aside from that area, we support a PPA that draws from both alternatives to achieve a net effective gain in habitat protections including priority habitats.

The PPA should close all unfished areas in the Southern California Bight

For the area south of Point Conception, California we request that the Council adopt the option proposed by Oceana et al. This alternative will create a new EFHCA closed to bottom trawling for any areas in the Southern California Bight that are not subject to trawl effort now. As we explain in further detail below, this option delivers significant conservation gains relative to all of the priority habitats we suggest as a focus for Am 28. Because this area falls outside the recent and historic trawling footprint, it will deliver increased habitat protection at essentially no cost to the fishing industry.

Prioritize protection of a diverse array of habitat types

The Council has directed that Am 28 include alternatives for new EFHCA's based on the presence of priority habitats.<sup>11</sup> The Project Team, in turn, has proposed that priority habitats be defined consistent with the Amendment 19 definition of "complex sensitive habitats."<sup>12</sup> While the guidance on developing alternatives based on priority habitats was specific to new EFHCA's in the RCA, we suggest that it is a reasonable and appropriate methodology to apply to Am 28 in general. The PPA should be populated with new EFHCA's or EFHCA expansions that protect priority habitats in all areas, including but not limited to the RCA. When the Council identifies the EFHCA changes that will be incorporated into the PPA, drawing from the two comprehensive alternatives as well as the other individual polygons that are available from other proposals or previous iterations of the coastwide proposals, it should seek to protect areas that best demonstrate the presence of one or more priority habitats.

We support the Project Team approach, but we have also suggested additional priority habitats in previous correspondence.<sup>13</sup> The Council's Habitat Committee has also recommended additional priority habitats.<sup>14</sup> Below we provide our analysis and recommendations on modifications to the list of priority habitats, and a preliminary list of suggested EFHCA's (polygons), drawn from the Am 28 alternatives, that should be included in the PPA due to the presence of priority habitats:

Areas that have not been fished recently or have never been fished

Pristine, unfished areas and recently unfished areas merit attention as a priority habitat for two key reasons. First, they often feature a compelling combination of undisturbed or recovering habitat, and little or no fishing effort that would be displaced. Second, because many of these areas are deep, remote, bathymetrically complex or some combination of the three, and because there is a lack of fishery-dependent data to inform decision-making, these areas are poorly surveyed and understood. A key pillar of EBFM is to take a precautionary approach to new (or restored) fishing in such areas; therefore closing them is a reasonable and appropriate course of action.

Key examples of unfished areas include core RCA areas that are outside the footprint of the shrimp trawl fishery, areas with high-relief rocky substrate, and the vast majority of the Southern California Bight. Finally, we note that the Habitat Committee has incorporated this suggested priority in several recent reports, suggesting in September 2015 that the Council should "Prioritize pristine or previously protected areas, or areas with low levels of fishing or non-fishing impacts"<sup>15</sup> and suggesting in April 2016 that the Council "Prioritize pristine or sensitive habitats and the gear types most likely to have the highest impact."<sup>16</sup>

Biogenic habitat such as corals and sponges

Living marine habitat including but not limited to corals and sponges have been demonstrated to be an important component of a healthy benthic habitat suitable for supporting groundfish populations. Appendix B to the Amendment 19 FEIS states that "In addition to corals, other structure-forming megafaunal invertebrates such as sponges and anemones are also a critical component of the habitat of continental shelf and slope ecosystems. Structure-forming megafaunal invertebrates refer to any epibenthic organism that grows to sufficient size to provide potential habitat structure for other benthic organisms and fishes."<sup>17</sup>

Chemosynthetic ecosystems (hydrocarbon seeps):

We have previously encouraged the Council to consider hydrocarbon seeps and the biological communities they support as a priority habitat, as has the Habitat Committee.<sup>18</sup> These unique features, also known as cold seeps or methane seeps, are areas where chemical-rich fluids are released from the seafloor. This energy source fuels primary production by dense aggregations of chemosynthetic microbes that are found both in and on the seabed. This in turn has fascinating and far-reaching fishery and ecosystem effects.

First, a series of chemical reactions initiated by the microbial consumption of methane eventually produces calcium carbonate, which precipitates as “extensive pavements” of the rocky substrate that is a core element of groundfish EFH and which allows deep-sea corals and sponges to gain a foothold.<sup>19</sup> Second, the microbes ultimately provide a food source to other marine life via multiple trophic pathways including symbiotic relationships, predation, scavenging, and advection (drifting) of microbes and other organic matter into the water column.<sup>20</sup> All of this ultimately allows a vibrant community of unique, slow-growing, and often habitat-forming sea creatures to flourish near the seeps, as well as supporting marine life well away from the seeps. Third, the microbial methane consumption keeps much of this potent greenhouse gas (up to 80%) from escaping the seep and passing, via the water column, into the atmosphere.<sup>21</sup> Thus the seep-dependent marine life is a critical climate regulator.

Scientists are steadily learning more about the location, ecological importance, and vulnerability of chemosynthetic ecosystems, including the potential impacts of bottom trawling which have been described as follows: “Causes physical disturbance and removal of 3D biogenic structures... Widespread interference with seeps is likely, affecting habitat provision, trophic subsidies and connectivity.”<sup>22</sup>

The nexus of seeps to U.S. West Coast groundfish and groundfish EFH is also clear. In addition to the aforementioned role of seep biota in the creation of rocky substrate and in the food web, recent research has demonstrated a possible link between seeps and Council-managed groundfish. At the Del Mar Seep, discovered off San Diego in 2012, researchers recently described significantly higher densities of longspine thornyhead at the most active seep microhabitats than at surrounding, non-seep areas.<sup>23</sup> Finally, there were exciting developments this summer when the research vessel E/V Nautilus undertook a coastwide cruise from British Columbia to Southern California with a significant focus on locating and studying methane seeps.<sup>24</sup> This cruise discovered approximately 500 new methane bubble streams, roughly doubling the number of likely seep sites known to exist in U.S. waters.<sup>25</sup> Preliminary data on the location of these newly discovered areas of seepage indicates a good number of them are in areas proposed for protection in Am 28 under various alternatives.<sup>26</sup>

We also suggest that methane seep habitats be incorporated into the description of groundfish EFH through the planned revisions to Appendix B of the FMP (Alternative 5.b, designated as a PPA in April 2016).<sup>27</sup>

A diverse array of habitats relative to substrate type, biogeographic province, and depth zones: In general, we suggest that a healthy marine habitat should include much more than the "classic" interpretation of rocky reefs. While those are important, so are other types of seafloor including soft sediments, which were recently determined to be particularly subject to under-valuation.<sup>28</sup> It is also important to ensure that diverse habitat types are represented from and within the variety of sub-regional areas (biogeographic provinces) and depth zones (nearshore, shelf, upper slope, lower slope, abyssal plain, etc.).

Large habitat closures forming a "corridor" (connecting shelf to upper slope to lower slope). One intriguing approach that can help achieve the habitat diversity objective described above is to utilize relatively large closures encompassing different habitat types. "Corridor" style closures that connect areas in all five depth zones represent a good opportunity and should be prioritized. Indeed, the Council's Habitat Committee (HC) suggested that the Council prioritize conservation areas that include a diversity of habitat types and incorporate the ecological principles that underlie a corridor-style closure (connectivity and size) in their September 2015 report to the Council.<sup>29</sup>

Corridors are a widely used tool in terrestrial conservation, and recent research highlights their utility in the marine environment as well, including the benefits of connecting diverse habitat types:

“In the sea, as on land, the area, quality and spatial arrangement of habitats are key determinants of the distribution, movement, growth and survival of organisms....Physical linkages between discontinuous habitats (either of the same or of different types) of the seafloor represent seascape connectivity....The importance of seascape connectivity has been well documented for post-settlement fish and crustaceans (i.e. individuals that have successfully recruited to a habitat or assemblage), which move among different habitats to spawn, forage or undertake ontogenetic habitat shifts....Moreover, seascape connectivity influences the spatial distribution of fish populations and fisheries catches and the outcomes of conservation initiatives.”<sup>30</sup>

Selected areas for consideration in the PPA that would protect priority habitats:

We request that the Council adopt a PPA including but not limited to the following areas, which offer significant gains in the protection of priority habitats and significant contributions towards the overall goal of a net gain in effective protections:

- Southern California Bight (Oceana et al.)
This area, previously discussed in some detail in this letter, is particularly promising because it contains all five of the priority habitats listed above. It is largely unfished. It is rich in biogenic habitat. It contains a number of methane seeps including the previously discussed Del Mar Seep. It contains significant amounts of habitat from all of the depth zones, with depths ranging from 8 fathoms to 1,511 fathoms. And finally, because it would run from relatively close to shore all the way out to the existing trawl footprint closure of waters deeper than 700 fathoms, it offers a very high degree of connectivity.
- Areas in Oregon state waters at Arago Reef, Blanco Reef, and Rogue River Reef (Industry-NGO Collaborative)
We encourage the Council to include these areas proposed by the Collaborative because they contain priority habitats (unfished, hard substrate, biogenic habitat), because they offer a good opportunity to improve the overall PPA in terms of conservation gains, and because the affected users (bottom trawlers) are supportive of the closures. We understand that there are jurisdictional and other concerns over the inclusion of state waters in the PPA, including the Council’s previous decision to exclude state waters from Am 28. However, we encourage the Council to seek solutions to these challenges, including any necessary revisions to the Range of Alternative and the Purpose and Need Statement, in order to include these areas.

- Rogue Canyon (MCI)
This polygon is rich in biogenic habitat and hard substrate. If adopted in concert with the Industry-NGO Collaborative's Rogue River Reef EFHCA (with the state waters components) it would also create a large, interconnected closure running from shore to the EEZ boundary. It would protect recently unfished and recovering areas in the RCA. Finally, three new areas of methane seepage were discovered in this area on the summer 2016 E/V Nautilus cruise.<sup>31</sup>
- Hydrate Ridge/Central OR Footprint Modification (Oceana et al.)
This is a unique and valuable area, with a significant amount of hard substrate and inferred rock, especially toward the north end of the hydrate ridge/hydrate knoll area. There are also several clusters of observed corals, with over 400 total coral observations. Finally, this area is a known hotspot for seeps.
- Heceta Bank West (Oceana et al. and MCI)
Both Oceana et al. and the Marine Conservation Institute (MCI) proposed expansions of the existing Heceta Bank EFHCA. We suggest combining both to achieve the largest possible westward expansion here. The area west of the current EFHCA appears rich in hard substrate and biogenic habitat, and also features a number of newly discovered and previously known areas of seepage.<sup>32</sup> It would also protect a significant amount of habitat that is currently in the RCA.
- McArthur Canyon (MCI)
The south end of this MCI-proposed EFHCA appears to contain a dense pocket of hard and mixed substrate, as well as several newly discovered areas of seepage.<sup>33</sup>
- Bandon High Spot West (MCI)
Preliminary data from the 2016 Nautilus cruise revealed over 40 methane bubble streams in this polygon, which totals only 41 square miles (only 25 percent of which was surveyed).<sup>34</sup> These streams likely comprise approximately 20 new seeps.<sup>35</sup> In addition, the area contains other priority habitats (hard substrate, predicted coral habitat, etc.)

- Samoa Deepwater (Oceana et al.)
This area appears to be particularly rich in hard substrate and coral/sponge observations. There are some significant areas of rocky reef running in a north-south cluster around the 300 fathom depth contour. The southernmost patches in particular are heavily clustered with coral observations.
- Astoria Canyon (MCI)
This MCI-proposed polygon is rich in seep habitats. Between preliminary 2016 Nautilus data and previously documented areas, there appear to be at least three dozen sites of seepage.<sup>36</sup> Remotely Operated Vehicle (ROV) dives in 2016 revealed seep habitats and carbonate outcrops.<sup>37</sup> This area also has abundant coral observations and a significant amount of hard substrate, as well as RCA overlap (which offers the potential to protect recovering areas). We do note that the hard substrate and seep habitats are for the most part confined to the southern end of this polygon (south of approximately 46 degrees 17 minutes north latitude). This suggests that the Council a smaller EFHCA here, if necessary, could still protect priority habitats.
- Gray's Canyon (Oceana et al.)
Gray's Canyon is an area of active seepage with many methane plumes including previously known sites and new sites.<sup>38</sup> Some known plumes are currently protected by the existing EFHCA and others by the RCA but some proposed alternatives would remove protections and others would expand them. We support the Oceana et al. proposal for an expansion of the EFHCA to the east, which would protect additional plumes, and we do not support the re-opening of parts of the current EFHCA on the west side as proposed under the Collaborative alternative, which would expose currently protected plumes to fishing effort. In all cases, our recommendations are for changes only outside the Tribal Usual and Accustomed Areas (U&A Areas), consistent with the Councils prior decision to limit the scope of Amendment 28 to exclude the U&A Areas.

Remove the RCA, and replace it with discrete EFHCA's to protect sensitive habitats and with adaptive management tools to address other conservation concerns

We support removing the RCA, as a mortality control, in areas of the coast that are within the scope of Am 28 provided these re-openings are sustainable and do not adversely impact habitat, or any other marine resources, especially overfished stocks. Sensitive and/or recovered habitats, biogenic habitat, or other priority habitats should be carefully identified and transitioned to EFHCA's. The RCA has already been found to include areas that may have partially recovered from trawl impacts.<sup>39</sup> While the RCA closures were not initially established to serve as habitat protection (they were intended to address catch and bycatch of overfished stocks), they are nevertheless recognized for their “corollary mitigating effect on adverse impacts to EFH.”<sup>40</sup>

Provided sensitive habitats within the RCA are identified and incorporated into new EFHCA’s, and that all other impacts (including impacts to protected species) are addressed, we support the adoption of RCA Alternative 3d as a PPA at this time. This alternative would remove the current coastwide RCA and replace it with a flexible system of block closures that the Council can deploy as needed (pre-season or in-season) to address high catch of any species of concern. The option for discrete area closures based on potential catch (“hotspot” closures) described in Alternative 3c seems to offer promise for crafting more targeted closures than the block approach in Alternative 3d, if and when a closure is deemed necessary. However, we believe Alternative 3d is a better choice for two key reasons. First, Alternative 3c is limited to overfished groundfish, whereas Alternative 3d could be used for any species (including non-groundfish and including non-overfished species).<sup>41</sup> This may provide a particularly valuable tool to the Council in the event that salmon catch becomes a problem in re-opened areas of the RCA, because the Council would have a broad, flexible, and efficient authority to re-close areas if required. Second, Alternative 3d states that “part of a block” would be available to close if deemed appropriate, therefore it appears that the option to implement a discrete closure would still be available.<sup>42</sup>

Carefully consider and address cumulative impacts, including those of other ongoing Council actions

As the Am 28 DEIS is developed in the months ahead, particularly with respect to cumulative impacts including adverse effects to groundfish habitat and also impacts on protected species, the Council should pay particular attention to three actions currently under development or in the NOAA Fisheries rulemaking stage, because these three actions have acknowledged and important connections to Am 28:

- Changes to Trawl Catch Share Program Gear Regulations: The Council took final action in March 2016 on this regulatory package that would remove several existing gear restrictions, including measures that may, as noted in the March 2016 NMFS Report, “increase access to rocky high relief habitat.”<sup>43</sup> NOAA Fisheries is currently working on the implementation rulemaking, although delays will mean that the original target date of early 2017 will not be achieved.<sup>44</sup> In light of this, the Council decided in September 2016 to consider an out-of-cycle Exempted Fishing Permit (EFP) application to fish under the liberalized gear regulations in early 2017.<sup>45</sup> Any resulting adverse effects to EFH from this EFP or from the Final Rule expected to eventually replace it must be identified and addressed.

- Salmon Endangered Species Act Consultation: The Council last received an update on this ongoing consultation at the March 2016 meeting, and is tentatively scheduled to receive an update in March 2017 and take final action in April 2017.<sup>46</sup> Information presented at the September 2015 meeting suggested that RCA changes might affect salmon bycatch rates in the bottom trawl fishery, and as such, potential cumulative impacts should be carefully considered.<sup>47</sup>
- Groundfish Vessel Movement and Monitoring: The Council took final action on this regulatory package in April 2016.<sup>48</sup> We have previously commented on the potential connections between this action and Amendment 28.<sup>49</sup> While the final Council action addressed some of our concerns, in particular by prohibiting gear testing in EFHCA's, we remain concerned about the lack of a requirement for continuous transit in EFHCA's and the exemption of pink shrimp vessels from increased ping rates given they are not permitted to fish in EFHCA's. We have also noted that enhanced VMS and/or increased ping rates may allow for more narrowly designed habitat closure boundaries. As this package moves through rulemaking, it will be important to assess and address its impacts on habitat through Am 28.

Apply the core tenets of EFH identification and protection and EBFM

As NOAA Fisheries and the Council continue development of Amendment 28, we again draw attention to five core tenets of EFH identification and protection, distilled from the EFH Guidelines, particularly application of an ecosystem-based approach to EFH protection. We previously described these five key tenets in our November 2013 correspondence, where we provide additional detail, but briefly they are as follows:<sup>50</sup>

- Utilize an Ecosystem-Based Approach
- Seek to Improve on Current Protections
- Consider all Life Stages of Managed Species
- Develop and Utilize the Best Scientific Information Available
- Protect a Wide Array of Habitat Types

Select examples of next steps consistent with these tenets include the prioritization of precautionary protections for pristine and recovered habitats, achieving a net effective gain in habitat protection, careful attention to analyzing cumulative impacts, and taking steps to address the ecosystem-level contributions of methane seeps by protecting them from trawl impacts.

RE: Agenda Item F.4 (Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat (EFH) and Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) Amendment)

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members,

Thank you for considering the following comments regarding proposed modifications to habitat protections in Amendment 28 to the Groundfish Fishery Management Plan (“FMP”). Amendment 28 offers an important opportunity to fulfill the Council’s duties to protect and enhance unique, sensitive, and important marine habitats. We ask the Council to select preliminary preferred alternatives (“PPA”) that provide comprehensive, improved protection for benthic habitat along the West Coast. In order to protect and enhance groundfish essential fish habitat (“EFH”) off the West Coast in accordance with Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (“MSA”) mandates, we recommend that the Council identify a preliminary preferred alternative that does the following:

- Creates new or expanded bottom trawl EFH Conservation Areas (“EFHCAs”) inside the 700 fathom depth line of sufficient size, quality, diversity, and geographical distribution to ensure a net increase in effective protections for benthic habitat, particularly when analyzed in conjunction with any re-openings of existing EFHCAs or the Rockfish Conservation Area (“RCA”).
- Includes the Comprehensive Conservation Proposal (Oceana et. al. 2013) alternative to create a new EFHCA closed to bottom trawling for any areas in the Southern California Bight (south of Point Conception) that are not subject to trawl fisheries now.
- Includes new EFHCAs in the PPA that protect the following priority habitats from adverse impacts of fishing gear:
  - Areas that have not been fished recently or have never been fished;
  - A diverse array of habitats relative to substrate type, biogeographic province, and depth zones;
  - Large habitat closures forming a “corridor” (connecting shelf to upper slope to lower slope);
  - Biogenic habitat such as corals and sponges;
  - Chemosynthetic ecosystems such as methane seeps;
- Identifies and incorporates sensitive habitats within the RCA into new EFHCAs, and addresses all other impacts including impacts to protected species.

In developing a PPA and moving forward with analyses, the Council must also fully analyze the impacts of proposed modifications to EFH together with other management measures that may affect EFH, overfished stocks, and protected species, including changes to trawl gear regulations, reopening of the RCA or areas within it, and the ongoing Endangered Species Act consultation regarding effects on salmon.

Other groups, such as the Pew Charitable Trusts and Oceana, have offered detailed analyses of conservation options and proposals. We believe these analyses are very instructive and should receive careful consideration from the Council; however, we will not attempt to reiterate or summarize them here.

The Preliminary Preferred Alternative Must Increase Net Effective Protection for Habitat

The Council has an important opportunity to improve habitat protections for groundfish, and promising options to work with. A great deal of thought and work has gone into the public proposals now before the Council. We commend the proponents for their efforts and appreciate the Project Team's efforts to analyze the effects of these proposals. The Project Team's analysis shows that both the Industry-Non-Governmental Organization Collaborative Proposal ("Collaborative proposal") and the Comprehensive Conservation Proposal ("Comprehensive proposal") would significantly increase fishing opportunity. The Project Team's analysis also shows that the Collaborative proposal on its own would result in a net decrease in habitat protection across several important habitat types, while the Comprehensive proposal would result in a net increase in effective protections across habitat types. The Council could combine certain aspects of these proposals to maximize the increase in effective habitat protections. We also encourage the Council to look at promising individual polygons identified in proposals submitted by the Marine Conservation Institute ("MCI") and others. Including important habitat areas from all of these proposals could help to ensure that the Council's PPA protects the appropriate array of habitat types and covers all geographic areas.

The MSA requires fishery managers to enhance the amount and quality of EFH by protecting healthy habitats and restoring previously damaged habitats. Thus, whether the Council chooses a single proposal or a hybrid, it must ensure that its PPA achieves a significant net gain in protections for diverse benthic habitats, including biogenic and chemosynthetic habitats, unfished and recovered habitat areas, and habitat corridors.

In adding the EFH requirement to the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act ("MSA"), Congress recognized that "[o]ne of the greatest long-term threats to the viability of commercial and recreational fisheries is the continuing loss of marine, estuarine, and other aquatic habitats. Habitat considerations should receive increased attention for the conservation and management of fishery resources of the United States." 16 U.S.C. § 1801(a)(9); see also id. § 1801(a)(2) (recognizing that direct and indirect damage to habitat diminishes the capacity to support fishing). Congress required that every FMP "describe and identify essential fish habitat" and "minimize to the extent practicable adverse effects on such habitat caused by fishing," while also identifying "other actions to encourage the conservation and enhancement of such habitat." 16 U.S.C. §§ 1801(9), 1853(a)(7). The MSA therefore requires three categories of actions with respect to EFH: (1) designating EFH; (2) minimizing harmful fishing impacts to EFH; (3) actively protecting and enhancing EFH.

To protect EFH, Councils are required to “prevent, mitigate, or minimize any adverse effects from fishing, to the extent practicable, if there is evidence that a fishing activity adversely affects EFH in a manner that is more than minimal and not temporary in nature.” Id. § 600.815(a)(2)(ii). Adverse effects mean “any impact that reduces quality and/or quantity of EFH,” and may include “direct or indirect physical, chemical, or biological alterations of the waters or substrate and loss of, or injury to, benthic organisms, prey species and their habitat, and other ecosystem components, if such modifications reduce the quality and/or quantity of EFH.” Id. § 600.810(a).

Importantly, Congress recognized that the identification and conservation of EFH would be an ongoing process. As scientific knowledge of fish species, their biological needs, habitat usage, and new information on adverse impacts advances, EFH designations and conservation must be updated to reflect that understanding. 16 U.S.C. § 1855(b)(1)(A) (requiring Secretary of Commerce, acting through the National Marine Fisheries Service (“NMFS”) to review and update EFH designations “based on new scientific evidence or other relevant information.”); 50 C.F.R. § 600.815(a)(10). Like all conservation and management measures promulgated pursuant to the MSA, EFH identifications and revisions must be based on the best available science. 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(2). NMFS regulations echo this requirement, calling on Councils to obtain EFH information from “best available sources,” including peer-reviewed literature and unpublished scientific reports, among others, and to “interpret [EFH] information in a risk-averse fashion to ensure adequate areas are identified as EFH for managed species.” 50 C.F.R. § 600.815(a)(1)(iv).

The MSA’s EFH provisions are meant to foster a proactive approach to protecting and enhancing fish habitat. See, e.g., H.R. Rep. 104-171 at 30-31 (expressing Congress’ intent in the 1996 Sustainable Fisheries Act “to encourage the Councils to take a proactive approach to limiting gear types that may harm fisheries or essential fishery habitat or increase bycatch”). The MSA and implementing regulations also contemplate continued efforts to minimize any adverse effects from fishing on all areas of EFH:

Councils must act to prevent, mitigate, or minimize any adverse effects from fishing, to the extent practicable, if there is evidence that a fishing activity adversely affects EFH in a manner that is more than minimal and not temporary in nature . . . . In such cases, FMPs should identify a range of potential new actions that could be taken to address adverse effects on EFH, include an analysis of the practicability of potential new actions, and adopt any new measures that are necessary and practicable. Amendments to the FMP or to its implementing regulations must ensure that the FMP continues to minimize to the extent practicable adverse effects on EFH caused by fishing.

50 C.F.R. § 600.815(a)(2)(ii) (emphasis added). These regulations should also be read in the context of the Magnuson-Stevens Act’s call for actions that not only protect EFH from harm, but enhance the quality of EFH. This aspect of the EFH provision further highlights Congress’ intent that EFH identifications and protections be implemented in a conservation-oriented, forward-looking way based on evolving information.

According to NMFS regulations, determining the practicability of minimizing adverse effects to EFH involves consideration of “the nature and extent of the adverse effect on EFH and the long and short-term costs and benefits of potential management measures to EFH, associated fisheries, and the nation, consistent with National Standard 7.” 50 C.F.R. 600.815(a)(2)(iii). National Standard 7 states that “[c]onservation and management measures shall, where practicable, minimize costs and avoid unnecessary duplication.” 16 U.S.C. § 1851(a)(7). Importantly, any conservation and management measures, including EFH decisions, must first satisfy MSA conservation goals before costs may be factored into the decision. In examining a claim involving National Standard 7, the D.C. District Court explained:

Explicit in both the statutory text and the implementing regulations is Congress's intent that conservation efforts remain the Secretary's priority, and that a focus on the economic consequences of regulations not subordinate this principal goal of the MSA. Hence, “[i]t is only when two different plans achieve similar conservation measures that the [NMFS] takes into consideration adverse economic consequences.”

N. Carolina Fisheries Ass'n, Inc. v. Gutierrez, 518 F. Supp. 2d 62, 91-92 (D.D.C. 2007), quoting Natural Res. Defense Council, Inc. v. Daley, 209 F.3d 747, 753 (D.C. Cir. 2000). See also Connecticut v. Daley, 53 F. Supp. 2d 147, 172-73 (D. Conn. 1999), aff'd sub nom. Connecticut v. U.S. Dep't of Commerce, 204 F.3d 413 (2d Cir. 2000) (“the language of National Standard Seven provides that costs should be minimized and duplication avoided where practicable, not absolutely”).

Similarly, in developing a PPA, the Council must determine which measures would provide the net effective improvement in habitat protection, in terms of protecting new habitat areas and restoring degraded habitat, required by the MSA. If the Council were to identify two different sets of measures that achieved similar increases in conservation benefit it might then consider which one costs less. In this instance, however, the Council is in the fortunate situation of having two proposals before it that actually increase fishing opportunity. The Project Team's analysis shows that both the Collaborative and Comprehensive proposals result in a significant net increase in fishing opportunity (13% and 10%, respectively), but that the Comprehensive proposal yields more conservation benefit in terms of areas and habitats protected.

The Council has indicated that it may develop alternatives by selecting discrete measures from each of these proposals as well as others (e.g. a proposal by the Marine Conservation Institute). In developing such a hybrid alternative, the Council should ensure that it protects a diversity of habitat types across geographic regions and, where possible, protects large habitat corridors to facilitate movement between habitat areas. The Council must be especially careful in examining any proposed reopenings of currently protected areas to ensure that the best available science shows that allowing such reopenings would achieve an effective net gain in EFH protection, particularly when analyzed in the context of the proposed RCA reopening. As required in EFH regulations, the Council must prevent, minimize, and mitigate damage caused by fishing to designated EFH, in addition to examining new areas for designation. 50 C.F.R. § 600.815(a)(2)(ii). Therefore, in order to reopen areas to fishing, the Council must demonstrate, based on the best available science, that doing so will not result in adverse effects to groundfish EFH. Overall, the Council should ensure that any PPA it develops achieves a similar or greater level of conservation benefit associated with the Comprehensive proposal.

The Council's PPA Should Include Protections for Additional Important Habitat Types

In addition to protecting traditional hard bottom habitat, such as rocky bottom and corals, the Council should protect other important habitats, such as methane seeps. Methane seeps are areas where hydrocarbons are released from the ocean floor, feeding microbes that produce a calcium carbonate "pavement," that in turn provides crucial substrate for corals and sponges. In addition to literally paving the way for the growth of groundfish habitat, methane seeps play a critical role in capturing greenhouse gases and preventing them from escaping through the water column and contributing to further climate change. See 50 C.F.R. 600.815(a)(5) (in designating EFH, must consider cumulative impacts with respect to climate change). Protecting these seep areas from trawling is necessary to prevent significant harm to their role in building important habitat and capturing greenhouse gases. In addition, designating these areas as EFH would ensure that impacts from non-fishing activities were addressed through the EFH consultation process. See 16 U.S.C. § 1855(b)(2) (EFH consultation requirement).

The Council Must Consider Cumulative Impacts and Impacts to Protected Species

The environmental impact statement for Amendment 28 must address any current or potential cumulative adverse effects to groundfish habitat stemming from the proposed alternatives and other fishery management measures that affect gear use and fishing effort in EFH and RCAs. For example, the Council has decided to adopt changes to certain gear regulations associated with the Trawl Catch Share Program. These changes are expected to be implemented in regulations next year, and in the meantime the Council is considering Exempted Fishing Permits to authorize vessels to fish under the loosened gear regulations in early 2017. These changes could adversely affect rocky bottom habitat. In addition, the Council has adopted changes to Groundfish Vessel Movement and Monitoring that could have impacts to habitat areas involved with Am. 28. Finally, under the Endangered Species Act and the MSA, the Council must ensure that any proposed changes to RCAs are not likely to jeopardize critically endangered salmon through increased bycatch. Any such possible impacts must be examined in the ongoing ESA consultation.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Andrea A. Treece

RE: Support for Essential Fish Habitat Protections off Southern California

Dear Chair Pollard and Mr. Thom:

We, the undersigned Southern California businesses and organizations, are writing in support of protecting living seafloor in the federal waters off Southern California to support sustainable fisheries and a healthy ocean ecosystem. The Southern California Bight—extending from Point Conception, California to the U.S./Mexico border—hosts a spectacular and diverse array of seafloor habitats, including ancient, slow-growing corals, sponges, rocky reefs, seamounts, methane seeps, submerged islands, and underwater canyons. Complex seafloor geology and living structures provide areas of shelter, feeding, and breeding for dozens of commercially and recreationally important fish species, and are the foundation for a diverse deep sea ecosystem.

Scientists are still discovering new species of corals and sponges here, some of which can live to be hundreds or even thousands of years old. Vibrant, cold-water habitats like these are susceptible to disturbance from bottom trawl fishing gear, which causes the greatest impact to seafloor habitats among all fishing gears in use off the U.S. West Coast. Based on available data on fishing effort, bottom trawling off Southern California is limited to a few nearshore areas; under current regulations, however, much of the Southern California Bight seafloor is at risk of damage caused by bottom trawling. Expansion of bottom trawling in the Southern California Bight beyond the nearshore areas where it currently takes place could have significant and long-lasting negative impacts. This region remains poorly documented, making it critical to protect the living seafloor from potential fishing-induced damage now while we still have the chance to better understand this area.

We ask that you continue your track record of precautionary management by designating all un-trawled areas south of Point Conception as an Essential Fish Habitat Conservation Area closed to bottom-trawling, as embodied in the Oceana/Natural Resources Defense Council/Ocean Conservancy alternative for this area. We also urge you to ensure that your action results in a net increase in the protection of sensitive habitats throughout U.S. West Coast ocean waters for the benefit of our sustainable fisheries, ocean ecosystems and coastal communities.

Please consider Port San Luis Commercial Fishermans Association's request to closures south of Pt. Sur be outside 150 fathoms. Our main fear being, they could become "Habitat Areas Of Particular Concern" all too easily. Not all of these areas are being trawled. Perhaps that is why we and the Morro Bay Commercial Fishermans Organization were excluded from any collaborative discussions. Sincerely, Dave Kirk

Chair Pollard and Council Members:

As you consider preliminary recommendations for revisions to the groundfish management plan, select alternatives that establish a net increase in protections for the nearshore areas where the trawl fishery operates. The Council's action should protect more sensitive, pristine, and recovered habitat than is currently protected. Vulnerable areas of rocky bottom, corals, and sponges within any long-standing closures must remain closed.

Include specific protections for methane seeps and the vulnerable biological communities they support. The importance of these areas is just beginning to be understood, including the roles that seep-dependent organisms play in preventing greenhouse gases from entering the atmosphere and in creating coral habitat.

I urge you to select the Oceana/Natural Resources Defense Council/Ocean Conservancy alternative for the area south of Point Conception, California. This alternative will create a new Essential Fish Habitat Conservation Area closed to bottom trawling for any areas in the Southern California Bight that are not subject to trawl effort now.

Healthy marine habitats along the West Coast help ensure a sustainable supply of fish. Move comprehensive habitat protection forward for the seafloor of the Pacific shelf and slope.

Dear Chair Lowman and council members,

I urge you to take action in November to proceed to the regulatory portion of the Essential Fish Habitat review process. This step is critical to ensuring that we are doing all we can to protect ecologically important areas that are susceptible to damage caused by bottom trawling and other fishing practices.

Although the council took action to protect areas identified as essential habitat during the last review several years ago, we now have better scientific tools and new information on where those areas are located, how fishing affects them, and what kind of protections are needed.

As a concerned citizen and a lover of the ocean, I encourage the council to build upon the work done through the current review process by considering all the submitted proposals and developing a package of management measures that both protects important areas and provides an opportunity for continued sustainable fishing.

Thank you for your stewardship of our marine resources.

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members:

Thank you for your past work to protect ocean habitat. As you consider preliminary recommendations for revisions to the groundfish management plan, please select alternatives that establish a net increase in protections for the nearshore areas where the trawl fishery operates. The Council's action should protect more sensitive, pristine, and recovered habitat than is protected today. I support reopening areas that can be fished sustainably without adverse effects on habitat, but vulnerable areas of rocky bottom, corals, and sponges within any long-standing closures must remain closed.

I also ask that you include specific protections for methane seeps and the vulnerable biological communities they support. The importance of these areas is just beginning to be understood, including the roles that seep-dependent organisms play in preventing greenhouse gases from entering the atmosphere and in creating coral habitat.

RE: Agenda Item F.4 (Groundfish Essential Fish Habitat [EFH] and Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) Amendment)

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members,

On behalf of Marine Conservation Institute, I write to express our support for the Pacific Fishery Management Council's efforts to carefully address and improve habitat protections and consider revisions to of existing regulations through Amendment 28 to the Groundfish Fishery Management Plan (FMP).

As the Council is aware, Marine Conservation Institute provided key science to the effort to identify essential fish habitat for groundfish. We support sustainable fisheries and protection of the diverse habitats that support these populations. Of paramount concern for us are the biogenic habitats (deep-sea corals and sponges) that support groundfish and are highly unlikely to recover from impacts of bottom trawling across management relevant time scales. The areas we identified from predictive habitat modeling<sup>1</sup> provided the best available science to fill holes in existing research or support places where no surveys or field research had been conducted. Our original proposal requested protection for places identified in the habitat modeling, and many of these are still important areas to consider in the Preliminary Preferred Alternative (PPA). They are now incorporated in suggestions put forward for by other groups; we support their inclusion and continue to urge the Council to protect these areas, including:

- Rogue Canyon
- Heceta Bank West
- McArthur Canyon
- Bandon High Spot West
- Eel River Canyon
- Delgado Canyon
- Noyo Canyon
- Point Arena Biogenic Area
- Western Side of Cordell Bank and Gobbler's Knob

<sup>1</sup> Guinotte, J. M. and A. J. Davies (2012). Predicted deep-sea coral habitat suitability for the U.S. West Coast. Report to NOAA-NMFS. 85 pp.

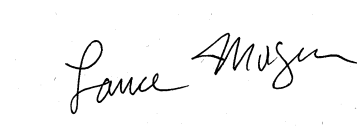

Additionally, as you develop the Preliminary Preferred Alternatives (PPA) addressing impacts to bottom trawl Essential Fish Habitat Conservation Area (EFHCA) and Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA), we ask that you consider the following points:

- Our primary concern is that we ensure a net increase in effective protections for benthic habitats when balanced against any changes to existing EFHCA's or the RCA, shoreward of 700 fathoms. These areas should include sufficient size, quality, diversity and geographical distribution to represent a range of habitats and depths.
- Ensure that the PPA includes the Comprehensive Conservation Proposal (Oceana et. al. 2013) alternative for the area south of Point Conception, California. This alternative will create a new EFHCA closed to bottom trawling for any areas in the Southern California Bight that are not subject to trawl effort now.
- Include new EFHCA's in the PPA that protect the following priority habitats from adverse impacts of fishing gear:
  - Areas that have not been fished recently or have never been fished;
  - Biogenic habitat such as corals and sponges;
  - Chemosynthetic ecosystems (hydrocarbon seeps);
  - A diverse array of habitats relative to substrate type, biogeographic province, and depth zones; and
  - Large habitat closures forming a "corridor" (connecting shelf to upper slope to lower slope).

I would also like to thank the Council for its attention to protecting areas of the seafloor deeper than 3,500 meters from fishing gear impacts, and for designating a discretionary closure of those areas as a PPA in April of this year.

I appreciate your time and the opportunity to work with you to maintain healthy ocean ecosystems and achieve sustainable fisheries.

Sincerely,

RE: Agenda Item F.4

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members,

We would like to commend the Council for its April 2016 identification of the deep-water bottom contact closure (>3500m) off of the Pacific Coast as a Preliminary Preferred Alternative (PPA) under Amendment 28 to the Groundfish Fishery Management Plan. This forward thinking and precautionary closure will protect pristine habitats that are inhabited by long-lived species and an ecosystem that is critical to the overall function of our planet and in part responsible for our productive surface oceans.

Now, as the Council turns its attention to PPA's for the Essential Fish Habitat (EFH) and Rockfish Conservation Area (RCA) components of Amendment 28, we strongly encourage that methane seep habitats be included as a priority in the designation of new Essential Fish Habitat Closed Areas (EFHCA), including new EFHCA's in any areas of the RCA that are deemed too sensitive to re-open if the RCA itself is rescinded.

Methane seep habitats (also known as cold seeps) are areas where energy from the seafloor is harnessed to augment production from the surface ocean; it is estimated that 10% of the total energy that is used by deep-sea organisms come from such habitats (Levin et al. 2016 Frontiers in Marine Science <http://dx.doi.org/10.3389>). These areas provide essential services to mankind through their consumption and storage of greenhouse gases (Schrag et al. 2013 Science 339, 540-543) and their modification of the seafloor through the creation of hard substrate that is considered EFH. This hard substrate in turn is used by taxa that also provide refugia to groundfish (specifically cold-water corals and sponges), amplifying the habitat services provided by seeps. While concrete evidence is limited, provocative preliminary evidence does exist linking the activity of methane seep habitats to commercial fish species, including Council-managed groundfish.

Microbial processes at methane seeps consume methane, a potent greenhouse gas, and they also deposit rock. Methane is 25 times as effective as carbon dioxide at warming our atmosphere and exists in vast reservoirs in the marine environment, including large deposits on the west coast of the United States extending from Mexico to Canada. As a byproduct of methane consumption, carbonate rock is deposited creating hard substrate on the seafloor. Carbon dioxide from seawater is also captured by this carbonate rock, resulting in a potentially important carbon dioxide sink in the oceans (Schrag et al.

2013 Science 339, 540-543). The rock itself becomes an attachment point for cold-water corals, deep-water sponges, large anemones, and especially soft corals (Anthomastus spp.) on the NW Pacific coast. These 'background' taxa augment fauna that are dependent on the seep for their survival. Thus, seeps directly create habitat suitable for fauna identified as biogenic habitat and which are currently considered a priority in the design of new habitat conservation areas. Further, large worms called vestimentiferans are known to increase the biodiversity at seeps by creating three-dimensional habitat structure and releasing chemicals through their 'roots', increasing the rate at which carbonate rock forms. These taxa are long-lived species, with life spans estimated to be >100 years (Cordes et al. 2007 Marine Ecology 28, 160-168). Damage to these habitats and seep endemic species (including these long-lived worms) cannot be considered temporary on human time scales and they should be considered for protection under U.S. fisheries law.

The direct role of seeps on fish stocks is currently unknown but a variety of evidence from many regions suggests an important role for certain species. Recently discovered methane seeps off of Southern California had an elevated abundance of longspine thornyhead (Grupe et al. 2015 Marine Ecology 36, 91–108). Similar observations have been repeated at seeps all along the west coast (pers. observations). Off Chile, the Patagonian Toothfish is found in greater densities at seeps than other locations (Sellanes et al. 2012 Lat. Am. J. Aquat. Res. 40, 980–991) and aggregations of commercially exploited fish including Orange Roughy, Oreo, Sablefish, and Dover Sole (Bowden et al. 2013 PLoS ONE 8:e76869 ; Grupe et al. 2015 Marine Ecology 36, 91–108 ; Levin et al. 2016 Frontiers in Marine Science <http://dx.doi.org/10.3389>) are common at seep sites. In addition, dense aggregations of crabs, especially Grooved Tanner Crabs (Chionoecetes tanneri) are often found at seep environments. Grooved Tanner crabs are not commercially harvested, however it has periodically been considered as a harvestable stock and is closely related to other species of Tanner crabs that are the focus of fisheries. In addition, elasmobranchs have been shown to use seep habitats as a refugia for their egg capsules (Treude et al. 2011 Marine Ecology Progress Series 437, 175-181). Though methane seeps have yet to be conclusively linked to the distribution and health of fish stocks, it is an area of active research with evidence suggesting that seeps may act as an essential fish habitat for at least some species.

While the distribution of methane seeps remains largely unknown, recent cruises have found them in abundance in the depth strata under consideration for the EFH and RCA PPA's at this meeting. During the last two years as many as 700 new sites of seepage have been identified between Northern California and the Canadian border (Johnson et al. G<sup>3</sup> 16:3825 ; NA-072 Nautilus Cruise Report: <http://www.pmel.noaa.gov/eoi/pdfs/2016-PacificCoast-NA072-CruiseReport-hires.pdf>). Most of these sites are identified at this time only as bubble plumes in the water column, but it should be noted that to date, Remotely Operated Vehicle (ROV) dives have reliably verified the presence of seafloor seeps in association with overlying bubble plumes. While there is debate on how many of these plumes should be lumped into one site (impacting the number of 'seeps' discovered), it is clear that seeps are a widespread and integral part of the California Current Ecosystem, including but not limited to the benthic habitat. Many of these new seep sites overlap with areas proposed for protection as new or expanded EFHCA's in Amendment 28. Others are in areas proposed for re-opening.

While many seeps likely remain to be discovered in the areas under consideration, we specifically would like to highlight the following sites that co-occur with dense plume fields and are likely hotspots of seep activity on the coast. In addition, during recent Cruises aboard the E/V Nautilus (NA-072 and NA-066 Nautilus Cruise Report: https://www.tos.org/oceanography/assets/images/content/29-1\_supplement.pdf, pp 40-43) some of these sites were visited by an ROV allowing basic information to be gathered (observations from S. Seabrook, pers. com. And Grupe, pers. observation):

Gray's Canyon: This site has not been directly dived on, however it is an area of active seepage with many plumes found within the canyon. Some known plumes are currently protected by the existing EFHCA and others by the RCA, but some proposed alternatives would remove protections and others would expand them. We support the Oceana et al. proposal for an expansion of the EFHCA to the east, which would protect additional plumes, and we do not support re-opening parts of the current EFHCA to the west as proposed under the Collaborative alternative, which would expose currently protected plumes to fishing effort. In all cases, our recommendations are outside the Tribal Usual and Accustomed Areas, consistent with the Council's prior decision to limit the scope of Amendment 28 to exclude the U+A Areas.

Astoria Canyon: This site was recently dived on by the E/V Nautilus and abundant seep habitats and carbonate outcrops were found at 494m water depth. Sablefish were observed in addition to fauna known to typically inhabit seeps. This area had intense and active seepage and we support the expanded coverage of the MCI alternative, which would protect the areas where we know the most active seepage occurs.

Heceta Bank: Also an area of active seepage across a diversity of depth profiles, this habitat included vestimentiferan tube worms known to be long-lived ecosystem engineers (Cordes et al. 2003, Ecology Letters 6:212-219). Anemones were also observed growing on carbonate outcrops. We encourage the Council to include the westward expansion of the current EFHCA proposed by MCI and Oceana in the PPA.

Bandon High Spot: This area has living seep fauna and carbonates created by seep activity with active seep sites at 615m depth. It is among the most dense seeping areas recently discovered, with 19 areas counted as distinct 'seeps' and 48 separate bubble plumes rising from the seafloor (data from Susan Merle and Dr. Robert Embley, NOAA). This area is proposed to be closed to trawling under the MCI-proposed "Bandon High Spot West" polygon, and we encourage the Council to include this site in the PPA.

Southern California Bight: ROV dives off the coasts of San Diego, Palos Verdes, and Point Dume near Malibu, CA also discovered seep habitats of note. Off of Palos Verdes, carbonate mounds associated with methane seeps from 350-450m depth contained very dense numbers of thornyheads and crabs. A methane seep discovered at about 700-750m depth near Point Dume is particularly noteworthy, as it was measured to be over 1.4 km long and up to several hundred meters wide. This may be the largest methane seep known in United States Pacific waters and contained abundant catsharks, thornyheads, and Dover sole. As a result, we support the Oceana proposed closure of areas in this region not subject to trawl effort. This closure would protect a number of these documented seeps.

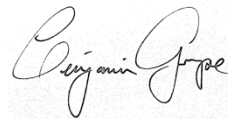

Trawling on seep habitats has a clear effect on the fauna that live there, although implications for large-scale cycles of methane and carbon have not been quantified. We do not know whether trawling leads to altered methane release from the sediment, however we have seen evidence that the growth orientation of vestimentiferan tubeworms shifts from upright to a lower growth form in areas with evidence of fishing (Baco et al. 2010 Marine Geology 272, 251-259). It is proposed that this impacts their efficacy as ecosystem engineers. Research on these tubeworms has occurred only in other regions. Until they were discovered at Heceta Bank seeps this year, they were not known to occur in the Pacific Northwest.

In just one cruise to the regions being discussed, over 500 new areas of seafloor seepage were observed, covering, in many cases, a single swatch of the seafloor along the 500m depth contour. We propose that those areas discovered with the greatest densities of seeps be included for consideration for protection from trawl fisheries under the Amendment 28 PPA. While the link between commercial fish production and seeps is unclear, their role in creating hard substrate for corals, anemones, and sponges, and the extreme longevity of some of their fauna makes them important considerations in the designation of conservation areas.

Sincerely,

Amendment 28 Alternatives

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members,

To date, the Pew Charitable Trusts has organized 8,050 members of the public to submit comments on Amendment 28 in support of a preliminary preferred alternative that increases the overall amount of protections for important Pacific Ocean habitat on the continental shelf and slope, which prioritizes unfished areas like the Southern California Bight, and which protects methane seep habitats.

The petition itself is included here, along with the first page of a compilation of the names, cities and states of individual signers that were submitted to the Council as of this morning, November 8, 2016. You may continue to receive additional messages before the 5pm PST deadline.

Thank you for your time and consideration. We appreciate the opportunity to work with you to maintain sustainable fisheries and healthy ocean ecosystems.

Mr. Herb Pollard, Chair
Pacific Fishery Management Council

Dear Chair Pollard and Council Members:

Thank you for your past work to protect ocean habitat. As you consider preliminary recommendations for revisions to the groundfish management plan, please select alternatives that establish a net increase in protections for the nearshore areas where the trawl fishery operates. The Council's action should protect more sensitive, pristine, and recovered habitat than is protected today. I support reopening areas that can be fished sustainably without adverse effects on habitat, but vulnerable areas of rocky bottom, corals, and sponges within any long-standing closures must remain closed.

I also ask that you include specific protections for methane seeps and the vulnerable biological communities they support. The importance of these areas is just beginning to be understood, including the roles that seep-dependent organisms play in preventing greenhouse gases from entering the atmosphere and in creating coral habitat.

Finally, I ask that you select the Oceana/Natural Resources Defense Council/Ocean Conservancy alternative for the area south of Point Conception, California. This alternative will create a new Essential Fish Habitat Conservation Area closed to bottom trawling for any areas in the Southern California Bight that are not subject to trawl effort now.

Healthy marine habitats along the West Coast help ensure a sustainable supply of fish for commercial and recreational fisheries and build a legacy we can pass to future generations. Again, please move comprehensive habitat protection forward for the seafloor of the Pacific shelf and slope.

Sincerely,

We the undersigned

RE: Agenda Item F.4 - EFH and RCA Alternatives

Dear Mr. Pollard, Pacific Fishery Management Council Chair and Mr. Thom, NOAA:

We, the undersigned 33,915 residents of the United States and U.S. Territories, write to express our concern for the future of the ocean's living seafloor. Corals, sponges, rocky reefs and underwater canyons provide essential habitat for the reproduction, feeding, growth and shelter of many species of ocean life, including commercially and recreationally important fish as well as other species like sea stars and octopus. Bottom trawling poses the single greatest threat to seafloor habitat and, in turn, jeopardizes the greater health of the ocean ecosystem.

As you review Essential Fish Habitat protections, you have the opportunity and responsibility to protect these resources, both for their intrinsic value and for the important benefit that these public resources provide us in return. Any changes to existing protection measures, including Rockfish Conservation Areas and Essential Fish Habitat Conservation Areas, should result in a net increase in protections for all habitat types, regionally and coast-wide. Furthermore, it would be irresponsible to reopen to bottom trawling any areas containing known sensitive habitat types. We urge you to adopt the conservation alternative based on the proposal submitted by Oceana and others that will increase the protection of seafloor habitats off the U.S. West Coast for the benefit of the oceans and future generations while maintaining vibrant fisheries.

Sincerely,

33,915 residents of the United States and U.S. Territories, including 8,961 residents of California, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho.
