Leadership Commitment

Diversity, Equity, Inclusion and Accessibility are more than just words. They are the guiding principles needed to build great teams, cultivate leaders and create an organization that ultimately becomes the right fit for every person inside of it. With a commitment to be a diverse and inclusive organization, we must make every effort to reflect these principles throughout our organization. Remember, federal agencies that value and practice the very tenets of inclusivity are more innovative and creative.

With the above in mind, we commit to advancing diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility at all levels of our organization and the communities we serve and protect. We will value a culture of respect where diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility are embraced and where all employees feel safe and valued. We will work to ensure that our programs, practices, and policies provide full and fair opportunities for employment, career advancement, and access to resources.

To truly change our culture and fulfill our commitment to diversity and inclusion, our approach will encourage a change in behavior and mindset by all members of our community. As a core value, we are committed to matching a diverse workforce to mission needs—we welcome and invite people of all backgrounds. We will cultivate this diverse workforce so that it reflects, understands, and responds to the varied communities and stakeholders we serve.

We recognize the tremendous work and effort it has taken to achieve the accomplishments associated with many of our diversity and inclusion goals, and we reaffirm our commitment to the D&I goals and objectives contained within this plan. We fully acknowledge the role of leadership to support engagement and involvement, as it is clearly required at the NOAA level in both the NOAA D&I Action Plan and the NOAA D&I Strategic Plan.

NOAA FISHERIES DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION POLICY STATEMENT

NOAA Fisheries is an organization that is renowned for its great research and science. However, to achieve such status, a tremendous amount of work was done by numerous individuals from various parts of the organization, with varying thoughts and approaches and from all walks of life. In other words, it took a diverse and inclusive workforce.

Diversity is important to me as a person, as a woman, and now as a federal civil servant. Over the years, I have witnessed the results of what can be done when we work together, connecting people in an environment that fully promotes diversity, equity, and inclusion and values employee engagement. People thrive in their jobs, opportunities arise, and we attract the best and the brightest talent to our ranks. In addition, when we have a work environment filled with employees of different backgrounds, skills, experiences, and knowledge who enjoy what they do, and where they work, there is a tremendous increase in both innovation and creativity.

Over the last several years, NOAA Fisheries has made the work of diversity and inclusion a top priority. Today, I want to make clear my support of these efforts and to further emphasize my commitment to you as we work to advance, cultivate, and preserve a culture of diversity, inclusion, and belonging. The work we do as an organization is critical to the nation. However, fostering diversity at all levels within Fisheries will make us a stronger, more successful organization, and align us with our overall mission of “creating an organization where fairness, diversity and inclusion are valued and where every employee has the opportunity to reach their fullest potential.” We must remain strategic in our efforts to uphold and enforce strong values, build a more supportive workplace, improve our outreach and recruitment efforts, and strengthen our organizational culture so that every employee feels valued and respected. Only when we have accomplished these tasks can we pause for a moment of reflection.

In the coming months, we will release our new NOAA Fisheries D&I Strategic Plan 2022-2025. The overarching goals of this plan will be to further enhance the corporate goals of workforce diversity, workplace inclusion, and sustainability. Implementing it will help further our broader goals of increasing our capabilities and promoting diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility throughout the organization. Each of us is responsible for ensuring the success of this plan, and I look forward to working with my colleagues to achieve these important objectives.

In closing, please remember that our ability to actively demonstrate the principles of diversity and inclusion is everyone’s responsibility. Whether a federal employee or a contractor, a manager or a non-manager, I stand firm on the conviction that we can achieve much greater success when we come together, consciously demonstrating and applying the principles of diversity, equity, inclusion, and accessibility. Doing so will further promote the type of healthy culture that results in NOAA Fisheries becoming a model representative in the federal workforce.

Our Objectives

1. To be a vibrant and productive workforce as we contribute to making NOAA Fisheries the best place to work.

3. To ensure managers and supervisors foster employee engagement and promote diversity and inclusion in our workplace.

“We’re united by our mission, we’re united by our commitment to government service, and we are committed to our national ideals of non-discrimination, tolerance, and justice.”

Deputy Assistant Administrator for Operations

Our Community

NOAA Fisheries is a multi-mission, geographically dispersed agency responsible for the stewardship of the nation’s ocean resources and their habitat. Our workforce is made up of individuals with a wide range of characteristics and experiences who serve diverse communities across the nation. We maintain that the best scientific work is achieved through a community that values diversity and inclusion throughout the agency. Our goal is that of an inclusive organizational culture that uses the collective experience of all our staff and that supports and encourages our differences rather than our similarities.

Our Commitment

Understanding that diversity, equity, and inclusion are essential to fulfilling our mission, we will strive to cultivate a culture that encourages collaboration, flexibility, fairness, and belonging. We recognize that employees, supervisors, and leaders at all levels play a critical role in this vision.

NOAA Fisheries Diversity and Inclusion Strategic Plan

Diversity and Inclusion Goals

The NOAA Fisheries Diversity and Inclusion Strategic Plan (2022-2025) contains corporate diversity and inclusion goals and objectives that are strategically aligned with the NOAA-wide diversity and inclusion goals and objectives. The NOAA D&I Strategic Plan (2020-2024), released in August 2020, is housed within the NOAA Office of Inclusion and Civil Rights. The three primary goals for both NOAA Fisheries and NOAA are:

- GOAL 1: Workforce Diversity: Recruiting and attracting a diverse, highly capable workforce.
- GOAL 2: Workplace Inclusion: Building a work environment that promotes inclusion.
- GOAL 3: Sustainability: Building sustained and adaptive leadership commitment to a diverse and inclusive NOAA through accountability, data, and education.

We are committed to building sustainability by implementing immediate changes to all policies, practices, and programs in an effort to identify and eliminate barriers to recruitment and hiring. These strategic goals will be our guidepost as we develop, implement, monitor, and track our progress and identify challenges.

Understanding Our Core Concepts

Equal Employment Opportunity laws support four critical aspects of a workplace where all employees are valued and feel a sense of belonging—diversity, equity, inclusion, and respect. The goal is to develop a shared understanding of what these aspects are, how they will contribute, and how they are adapted across the agency.

Diversity

Diversity is all of the ways in which we as individuals are similar to and different from one another.

Note from this definition that diversity includes both similarities and differences. In other words, it is not just members of a marginalized group, rather it is everyone in the workplace. Diversity encompasses the cultural, psychological, physical, and social human differences that make individuals unique. It includes both visible differences such as race, ethnicity, and age and invisible differences such as socioeconomic background, beliefs, and values that lead to different perspectives and ways of seeing the world.

Equity

Equity promotes fairness by creating a level playing field for everyone. It recognizes that some individuals have experienced unfair advantages or disadvantages because of some aspect of their identity.

Equity promotes fairness by addressing injustice and creating a level playing field. Equality is meant to ensure that everyone is treated the same. However, equality in our society assumes that everyone is standing at the same starting line of the race, when in reality some people have for centuries received unequal treatment that has either given them unfair advantages or disadvantages. It is illogical to assume that we can offer everyone the same thing that will level the playing field. Equity focuses on trying to understand where people are starting from and identifying what they need to be successful. In the workplace, equity includes ensuring that policies, procedures, and practices are free of bias (conscious or unconscious) and favoritism.

Inclusion

Inclusion refers to workplace practices that create an environment where each individual member of a diverse workforce is treated with dignity and respect, feels valued, is able to fully develop their potential, and contributes to an organization's success.

While diversity is about the mix of people within the workforce, inclusion is about the workplace. It is actions taken to create and sustain a sense of belonging where all employees feel empowered to share their unique perspectives and ideas and to be heard.

Respect

"Due regard for the feelings, wishes, rights, or traditions of others." – Oxford Dictionary

"Caring enough to consider how words and actions impact others." – Talking Tree Books

As reflected in the above definitions, respect is about how we treat others and how we want to be treated by others. Respect can mean different things to different people—it does not look the same for everyone.

Accessibility

The term "accessibility" means the design, construction, development, and maintenance of facilities, information and communication technology, programs, and services so that all people, including people with disabilities, can fully and independently use them.

Accessibility includes the provision of accommodations and modifications to ensure equal access to employment and participation in activities for people with disabilities, the reduction or elimination of physical and attitudinal barriers to equitable opportunities, a commitment to ensuring that people with disabilities can independently access every outward-facing and internal activity or electronic space, and the pursuit of best practices such as universal design.

Continuing the Conversation

NOAA Fisheries Listening Sessions entitled “Continuing the Conversation” is in pursuit of a more comprehensive approach to advancing and ensuring equity for all. It has been, and will continue to be, a catalyst that allows us to hear staff, identify real issues and concerns, and design a way forward for implementing change.

We commit to not only continuing the difficult conversations that stretch us beyond the business case for a truly diverse and inclusive workplace culture, but to improving the necessary efforts to attract, hire, and retain the best and brightest. Talking about diversity and inclusion alone will not change or move the historical demographics of our organization. Rather we must take the steps necessary to harness the effective benefits or advantages of a truly diverse workforce.

We remain steadfast in our commitment to:

- Ensuring we have healthy communication throughout the organization.
- Providing a safe environment for all.
- Bringing about sustainable change through dialogue with leadership that includes action follow-through.

Managing diversity and inclusion is the responsibility of all and to be successful it will require a rededicated and full-throated commitment and engagement from managers and supervisors and those staff members who are willing to volunteer to do the work. In addition, those who are in leadership positions will be called upon, not only to shoulder the responsibility, but to champion key efforts needed to manage D&I effectively.

Diversity is a fact of life that is always present even when it might not be visible. Equity and respect can be a matter of perception—whether people feel everyone is respected and treated fairly in the workplace or not. Inclusion, on the other hand, is a value proposition.

NOAA Fisheries staff, at all levels of the organization, have greatly contributed to the direct and tangible actions incorporated to ensure that diversity, equity, and inclusion is embedded into our organizational culture. We agree that lasting change will not occur overnight, and we are committed to having the difficult conversations, challenging the narratives that impede progress, and continuing honest and transparent communication to update you on where we are and the work ahead.
