RE: Agenda Item G.2 - Swordfish Management Plan and Hard Caps FPA

Dear Chair Lowman and Council members:

We write in regards to the future management of the West Coast swordfish fishery. At its September meeting, the Pacific Fishery Management Council (Council) has the opportunity to establish a schedule and process for transitioning away from drift gillnet (DGN) gear toward a more sustainable fishery. To this end, we request the Council take the following actions:

1. develop a Swordfish Management and Monitoring Plan (Plan) that includes a transition away from DGN gear to more selective and actively tended gears;
2. establish a timeline and schedule for authorizing deep-set buoy gear (DSBG) under the Highly Migratory Species (HMS) Fishery Management Plan (FMP) as soon as possible; and
3. adopt a Final Preferred Alternative (FPA) that implements annual hard caps on high-priority protected species based on entanglements, establishes performance objectives on finfish and other bycatch species, and requires 100 percent monitoring in the DGN fishery.

Pew supports a healthy and sustainable swordfish fishery off the West Coast without the controversial collateral damage caused by DGN gear. By taking the above actions, the Council can move toward that goal.

Draft a Swordfish Plan that includes a transition to alternative gears

In adopting a "Swordfish Management and Monitoring Plan," the Council should consider the broader West Coast swordfish fishery and not focus solely on improving the performance of the DGN fishery. The DGN fishery has been a source of controversy since its inception due to high levels of bycatch, especially take of protected species. At the September meeting, the Council has the opportunity to change management of the West Coast swordfish fishery and move toward more selective and actively tended fishing gears. The public's support for such a transition is abundantly clear. Over the past year alone, thousands of people and dozens of organizations and businesses have contacted the Council urging a shift away from DGN gear. As stewards of a public resource, the Council should transition to a fishery that consumers can be proud to support. This conversation will inevitably include a discussion on imported swordfish. However, the relative state of bycatch in foreign fisheries should not influence the Council's goal to reduce bycatch in the DGN fishery and should not be used as the rationale for the Council to avoid transitioning the fishery to more sustainable fishing gear types.

Establish a timeline for authorizing deep-set buoy gear under the HMS FMP as soon as possible

As a first step toward a transition, the Council should adopt a process and schedule for authorizing DSBG in the HMS FMP. At the Swordfish Workshop hosted by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Fisheries Service (NOAA Fisheries) in May 2015, there was broad support and consensus that DSBG should be made an allowable gear. Therefore, we propose that the Council schedule scoping on authorization of DSBG by March 2016 to align with the Pfleger Institute of Environmental Research's exempted fishing permit (EFP) preliminary report. Given DSBG has gone through four years of research and testing with positive results,[1] it is not necessary for the Council to wait for the conclusion of the EFP to begin the FMP amendment process.

The Council should prioritize the approval of DSBG above other HMS workload considerations, particularly those that are likely to be controversial such as authorizing a shallow-set longline fishery outside of the exclusive economic zone. It makes little sense to delay authorization when DSBG has broad support from fishermen, scientists, seafood buyers, fishery managers, and the conservation community. We recommend that the Council further discuss this under Agenda Item C.6 - Future Council Meeting Agenda and Workload Planning.

Adopt an FPA that implements annual hard caps on high-priority protected species based on entanglements, establishes performance objectives on finfish and other bycatch species, and requires 100 percent monitoring

We support the implementation of hard caps and other performance objectives in the DGN fishery as interim measures to hold the fishery accountable while transitioning to alternative selective gears. However, hard caps and performance objectives should not be viewed as a solution to bycatch problems in the DGN fishery. Instead, these management measures are a way to curtail the damage caused by the fishery while more selective gears are developed and adopted.

[1] PIER Presentation, West Coast Swordfish Workshop, May 2015.

Since the Council first discussed hard cap management numerous delays have postponed the regulatory process. While we understand the need to be thorough and make an informed decision, there is ample analysis for the Council to take final action at this meeting without further delay. To meet this objective, we support an alternative that includes annual hard caps on high priority protected species based on entanglements and performance objectives on finfish and other marine mammals with 100 percent monitoring.

Pew opposes implementing a two-year average or two-year rolling cap. Annual hard caps are the most straightforward way to reduce bycatch and hold the DGN fleet accountable while a transition to alternative gears occurs. The two-year caps proposed by the Highly Migratory Species Management Team (HMSMT) offer a deceptively attractive alternative because there is a possibility that a two-year cap could close the fishery less often.[2] However, there is no evidence that this alternative would "limit bycatch to a greater degree"[3] or equivalently to annual caps. There is, however, a likelihood that "the incentive to avoid risky fishing behavior would be reduced"[4] toward the end of a fixed two-year period.

We agree with the California Department of Fish and Wildlife that hard caps should be based on entanglements and not serious injury and mortality.[5] Basing hard caps on entanglements allows for easier enforcement because an entanglement can be determined by an observer at the time of observation without the need for further review by the Scientific Review Group. The Observer Program has a process in place for recording entanglements and NOAA Fisheries can easily determine when a hard cap is reached.[6]

When adopting an FPA, the Council should include performance objectives on other bycatch species including marine mammals, mola, blue sharks, and other finfish. Even with the proposed hard caps in place, over sixty percent of the catch in the DGN fishery is likely to be discarded overboard.[7] This is an unacceptable level of bycatch by any standard, particularly when new gears are being developed that can catch swordfish with less than 10 percent bycatch.[8] Given the ability to target swordfish with minimal bycatch, the Council needs to evaluate what level of bycatch reduction is practicable in the West Coast swordfish fishery as required by the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act. Performance objectives for other marine mammals and finfish and an overall discard rate are necessary to address this issue in the DGN fishery and should be comparable to the performance of new gears. There is ample information in previous HMSMT reports[9] to analyze appropriate bycatch performance objectives and adopt a preferred alternative at this meeting.

In order to ensure hard caps and performance objectives are properly enforced, the Council should require 100 percent monitoring beginning in the 2016-2017 fishing season that is fulfilled by the use of human observers until electronic monitoring is proven to be reliable in detecting rare event bycatch. This will take away the need for extrapolation of observed entanglements and the possibility that the fishery is shut down prematurely under hard cap management. We are sympathetic to the cost of observer coverage and understand that NMFS may not be able to fund 100 percent observer coverage in the DGN fishery. For this reason, the Council should consider the benefits of requiring partial industry funding to cover the costs of at-sea monitoring.

Finally, the Council needs to identify a meaningful management response if the fishery exceeds a marine mammal or finfish performance objective. This should include a structure and process for timely review of bycatch data and define levels at which particular management response would be warranted, including closure of the fishery.

Conclusion

While hard caps, performance standards, and increased monitoring are an important step in ensuring accountability in the DGN fishery, these measures do not go far enough. As long as DGN gear is deployed in the swordfish fishery, there will be unacceptable levels of bycatch and interactions with rare and vulnerable species. To address this, the Council must develop a plan for transitioning the DGN fishery to more selective and environmentally sustainable gear types and move toward a fishery that can be a model for bycatch minimization. We look forward to working with the Council and other stakeholders to achieve this goal.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Lowman,

The Deadly Driftnet Fishery for swordfish is operating in violation of conservation laws protecting marine mammals. Driftnets have been banned on the High Seas and along most of the U.S. West Coast because of high bycatch of marine life including endangered whales, dolphins, sea turtles, shark, tuna and other non-target fish.

I urge you to begin to phase out the fishery along our coast and instead to support sustainable fishing practices that don't compromise the health of endangered species, sperm whales, fisheries and our oceans.

Sincerely,

RE: Agenda Item G.2 Swordfish Management and Monitoring Plan Hardcaps

Dear Ms. Lowman, Council Members, Pacific Fishery Management Council; Ms. Sobeck and Mr. Stelle, National Marine Fisheries Service:

We, the undersigned 58,097 residents of the United States and U.S. Territories (including 15,250 residents of California, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho), urge you to implement the strongest possible hard caps for the 2015/2016 fishing season and beyond for endangered fin, humpback, and sperm whales, short-fin pilot whales, and common bottlenose dolphins; as well as for endangered leatherback, loggerhead, olive ridley, and green sea turtles. Please adopt the California Department of Fish and Wildlife preferred alternative for hard caps and adopt strong performance objectives for other fish and marine mammals. These wild ocean animals are at risk of entanglement, injury, and death in the California-based swordfish drift gillnet fishery. What is more, it is not acceptable to allow this fishery to continue to kill, without consequence, marine life like dolphins, sea lions, large numbers of sharks and other valuable fish in the pursuit of swordfish. The bycatch of these species must be capped, controlled and ultimately put to a stop. To effectively implement hard caps, we ask you to require 100 percent observer coverage and/or electronic monitoring. Despite current regulations on gear types and allowable fishing areas, the bycatch in drift gillnets is simply deplorable.

Mile-long drift gillnets, meant for swordfish and thresher sharks, form dangerous underwater walls of death that drown or critically injure an appalling number of other animals. These nets entangle and kill roughly one hundred protected marine mammals per year, continue to take endangered sea turtles and sperm whales, and kill unacceptably high numbers of non-target species such as blue sharks, bigeye thresher sharks, striped marlin, ocean sunfish, and others.

Ultimately, to maintain the health and biodiversity of the California Current marine ecosystem, drift gillnets should be prohibited and replaced with cleaner fishing methods. Last year, the Council committed to transition away from drift gillnets to cleaner gear types, and recently California legislators, members of the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate, called on you to support a transition plan that includes a definitive end to drift gillnets off the West Coast. Deep-set buoy gear is showing strong promise as an alternative fishing gear type that effectively targets swordfish with substantially less bycatch than drift gillnets or pelagic longlines. Hard caps should be an interim measure to provide critical marine life with additional safeguards while a full transition plan to clean gear types is developed and implemented.

We strongly oppose any expansion of drift gillnets into the Pacific Leatherback Conservation Area or reintroduction of pelagic longlines off the U.S. West Coast through Exempted Fishing Permits or otherwise. The Pacific Fishery Management Council (Council) and National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) should be moving to transition away from drift gillnets and should not consider pelagic longlines as an acceptable transition gear. This gear type has been banned off California for 30 years for a reason; it carries similar bycatch concerns as drift gillnets. If the Council and NMFS have the goal of a sustainable West Coast swordfish fishery, efforts should focus taking a step forward by promoting clean gears, not taking steps backward to fishing gears known to be dirty.

The Council and the NMFS have the responsibility to protect marine life. Please safeguard our ocean wildlife; establish a transition plan that phases out and prohibits drift gillnets, with meaningful hard caps and 100 percent monitoring designed to reduce and control bycatch in this fishery as an interim measure.

Sincerely,

58,097 residents of the United States and U.S. Territories

RE: Agenda item G.2 – Swordfish Drift Gillnet Management including Final Action on Hard Caps

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members:

We support sustainable and responsible use of ocean resources. Collectively, our members and customers enjoy diverse activities such as marine wildlife viewing, whale watching, recreational fishing, dining on sustainable seafood, and safeguarding an ocean ecosystem we can leave future generations. The use of drift gillnets targeting swordfish off the California Coast harms our ability to enjoy those activities.

We appreciate the responsiveness to some of our requests in our February 11, 2015 letter (attached). Thank you for seriously considering measures to put low, annual hard limits on the number of protected species the drift gillnet fishery can entangle. We urge you to adopt the California Department of Fish and Wildlife preferred alternative[1] of hard caps for specified marine mammal and sea turtle species, and also adopt strong performance objectives for other fish and marine mammal bycatch. We support 100% observer coverage and/or electronic monitoring so that bycatch caps can be quickly enforced when reached. These measures, however, should only serve as an interim measure to reduce and avoid bycatch while a full transition from drift gillnets is made to cleaner, more environmentally responsible gear types. Further, we strongly oppose renewed efforts through Experimental Fishing Permits (EFPs) to reintroduce pelagic longlines off the West Coast or expand the use of drift gillnets into the Pacific Leatherback Conservation Area.

[1] As in: http://www.pcouncil.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/03/H4b_Sup_CDFW_Rpt_MAR2015BB.pdf

These drift gillnets — over one mile in length and 200 feet deep — are set at night in ocean waters off California to target swordfish and thresher sharks, but instead catch roughly 60 different species of marine life including many types of whales, dolphins, seals, sea lions, sea turtles, sharks, tunas, marlins, and other fishes[2]. On average approximately 64 percent of the catch is discarded[3]. Approximately one quarter of these discards are already dead upon release, and the post-release survivorship of the remaining discards is unknown for most bycatch species. The use of drift gillnets is also harming recreational fishing, depleting the ocean of fishing opportunities that support outdoor tourism and local jobs.

Russia recently joined the long list of regions worldwide to prohibit the use of drift gillnets in their waters. The drift gillnet ban was signed by the Russian President in July and it will go into effect January 1, 2016. Drift gillnets are banned in the EU and in the high seas, were phased out off the U.S. East Coast, and are not permitted by Oregon or Washington states.

Other gear types like harpoon and deep-set buoy gear can be used to target swordfish in a clean and responsible manner. Swordfish caught with these gears earn substantially higher prices in the marketplace relative to drift gillnet-caught swordfish, and recent experimental trials suggest that deep-set buoy gear can be an effective, profitable method to catch swordfish off the U.S. West Coast[4]. We urge the PFMC and NMFS to promote these gear types including authorizing deep set buoy gear as part of the transition away from drift gillnets. However, we strongly oppose the consideration of pelagic longlines as a potential alternative gear type, as this method has been prohibited off the West Coast for decades due to equally problematic bycatch concerns that have yet to be solved.

In this time of ecosystem-based fishery management it would be irresponsible to continue to allow drift gillnets to catch and kill our nation's ocean wildlife and recklessly discard unwanted catch, much less expand the use of drift gillnets into areas currently off limits to this gear. This drift gillnet swordfish fishery — making up less than one-half of one percent of the ex-vessel value of California's commercial fisheries — has failed to meet the bar of sustainable management despite over 30 years of attempts to address bycatch concerns and continues to have among the highest discard rates in the nation. It is time to transition away from drift gillnet fishing for swordfish.

In summary, at this September meeting we urge you to:

- Take final action to adopt the California Department of Fish and Wildlife preferred alternative for hard caps.
- Cease efforts to expand drift gillnet gear or pelagic longlines off the U.S. West Coast.
- Authorize and promote deep set buoy gear.
- Return to the commitment the Council made at the March 2014 meeting to establish a swordfish fishery transition plan that ends the use of this unselective gear type.

RE: H.4. Drift Gillnets

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members:

We write to express serious concern with the continued management and authorization of drift gillnets used to target swordfish in the California Current ecosystem. We urge you to immediately develop a transition plan that ends the use of drift gillnets and promotes clean gear alternatives. During the transition period to a sustainable swordfish fishery, we request that the Pacific Fishery Management Council (PFMC) and National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) immediately implement meaningful annual hard caps that limit and reduce the bycatch of whales, dolphins, pinnipeds, sea turtles and fish species taken in this fishery, enforced with 100% observer coverage and/or electronic monitoring.

Drift gillnets — approximately one mile in length — are set at night in ocean waters off California to target swordfish and thresher sharks, but instead catch nearly 60 different species of marine life including many types of whales, dolphins, seals, sea lions, sea turtles, sharks, tunas, marlins, and other fishes.[1] On average approximately 64% of the catch is discarded. Approximately one quarter of these discards are already dead upon release, and the post-release survivorship of the remaining discards is unknown for most bycatch species.

The use of drift gillnets is also harming recreational fishing, depleting the ocean of fishing opportunities that support outdoor tourism and local jobs. Importantly, other gear types like harpoon and deep-set buoy gear can be used to target swordfish in a clean and responsible manner. Swordfish caught with these gears earn substantially higher prices in the marketplace relative to drift gillnet-caught swordfish. We urge the PFMC and NMFS to promote these gear types as part of the transition away from drift gillnets. However, we strongly oppose the consideration of pelagic longlines as a potential alternative gear type, as this method has been prohibited off the West Coast for decades due to equally problematic bycatch concerns that have yet to be solved.

When implementing interim management measures to reduce bycatch in this fishery, annual hard caps should be set so that if reached or exceeded, the fishery will be closed for the remainder of the year. These caps must be set at low levels so that they act as a strong incentive to reduce and avoid bycatch from current unacceptable levels. We support 100% monitoring so that the bycatch caps can be quickly enforced when reached.

In this time of ecosystem-based fishery management it would be irresponsible to continue to allow drift gillnets to catch and kill our nation's ocean wildlife and recklessly discard unwanted catch. This drift gillnet swordfish fishery — making up less than one-half of one percent of the value of California's fisheries — has failed to meet the bar of sustainable management despite over 30 years of attempts to address bycatch concerns. Please act now to implement hard bycatch caps for the 2015/16 season and beyond and establish a swordfish fishery transition plan that ends the use of this gear type.

RE: Swordfish Drift Gillnet Management including Final Action on Hard Caps

Dear Chair Lowman and Council Members:

Our Company, Light & Motion, is a US manufacturer of lights for divers and ocean recreation on boats. We depend on a healthy ocean for our business and that means properly managed resources. The drift net is a throw back to an era where folks assumed the oceans were an infinite resource. Clearly they are not and we must do a far better job of taking care of them.

Thank you for seriously considering measures to put annual hard limits on the number of protected species the drift gillnet fishery can entangle.
